INTRODUCTION.

CHAPTER I.

ANTHONY WELTDEN, GOVERNOR OF FORT WILLIAM IN BENGAL.

THE present volume deals with the Bengal records for the years 1711 to 1717, and is concerned with the administration of three governors of Fort William, Anthony Weltden, John Russell, and Robert Hedges. Of these, the first held office for nearly seven and a half months, during which time he could effect nothing of any importance, though he left behind him an evil name for corruption; the second was an old servant of the Company who, during his rule of two years and nine months, either could not, or would not, introduce any great changes; while the third, the nephew of a reforming uncle, used his four years of power to introduce many changes. With his death the period closes.

Anthony Weltden, the fourth son of Henry Weltden of Thornby, was of good birth, his family being able to trace their descent in unbroken line from Bertram de Waltden in Northumberland about the time of the Conqueror. As the youngest son of the youngest branch of the family, Anthony, of course, had no expectations. Hence it is not improbable that he was at an early age sent off to sea to make his fortune or drown.¹

Of his childhood nothing is known; but as a young man he came into painful prominence in connection with the massacre of the English at Mergui in 1687.² In the previous year, the English, already at war with the Mogul government, had determined to demand compensation of the king of Siam for damages alleged to have been done to the East India Company and its servants, and to make reprisals upon that king's vessels and those of his subjects. On the 24th March, 1687,

² The story of the Siam expedition is given very fully by Anderson in his English Intercourse with Siam. In the addenda, pp. 312—316, I have given references to it found in the Company's records.

the Curtana frigate, commanded by Captain Anthony Weltden, which had left Portsmouth in June 1686, reached Madras, and on the 6th May the Royal James arrived from the west coast of Sumatra. The Council of Fort St. George had private grievances to settle with the Siamese, and were eager to begin hostilities. Without waiting for further instructions from Bombay, they resolved to send the Curtana and the James to Mergui to clear the port of the Siamese men-of-war and to bring away all the English there.

The expedition under Weltden's command set sail on the 2nd June; and on the afternoon of the 23rd June the yawl of the Curtana was seen pulling into the harbour of Mergui. The local governor and the port officer, both Englishmen, received the men in the boat with every civility; and on the following morning the Curtana herself was piloted over the bar into the harbour, and anchored two miles from the town. Later on Weltden went ashore in state, and read a proclamation by James II of England, commanding all his subjects to quit the foreign service of the country within twenty days and repair on board the Curtana.

On the 25th war was proclaimed with Siam, but on the 28th a truce was concluded for sixty days to allow messengers to carry a letter with the English demands to the capital and bring back the king's answer. The next day the James entered the harbour and was anchored close up to the house of Samuel White, the port officer. Meanwhile the Siamese were constructing defences. They staked the river, laid down great cables, and built a platform to carry fifteen guns. Weltden not liking these preparations, in spite of the truce, pulled up the stakes and on the 9th July seized the Resolution, a great ship belonging to White, the Siamese port officer.

These rash and treacherous proceedings were keenly resented by the people of Mergui, and they determined to take revenge. On the evening of the 14th July, 1687, Captain Anthony Weltden had been supping with White ashore, and, accompanied by his host, was standing on the wharf, about to enter his barge, and return to his ship. Suddenly an infuriated mob sprang out of the night; a blow on the head felled Weltden to the ground; and his assailants leaving him for dead at the water's edge turned to massacre every Englishman in Mergui. At the same time the great guns from the forts opened fire, and the James was forced to surrender. Only two Englishmen escaped out of the fire and bloodshed to the ships lying out in the harbour, White, who had jumped into the boat and pushed off at the beginning of the fray, and Weltden, who was strangely preserved by his dress. His beaver hat had broken the force of the blow, and his black clothes rendered him invisible in the darkness. Recovering consciousness, he ran to the port officer's house, where he met a Mussalman, who pointed him to the boat still driving along the shore. He hurried towards it, plunged into the mud, was seen by the crew and dragged on board. The boat after hiding for two or three hours behind the bushes of a mangrove swamp at last under cover of the wind and the rain reached the Resolution.

Captain Weltden on the Curtana and Samuel White on the Resolution left the mouth of the river on the 18th July and made for the islands of the Mergui archipelago. Thence Weltden sailed to Cape Negrais, where he surveyed the island and hoisted the English flag, setting up an inscription on a plate of tin and burning several huts and a carved piece of timber, which the Siamese had left in token of possession. After this he spent some time at the Nicobar Islands, "and brought a Spanish priest thence with his observations upon the people and place, leaving another behind to convert the ignorant inhabitants." At Achin he rejoined White, and sailed with him to Madapolan. Here, on the 24th December White, pretending to have business at Pulicat, took his leave and made off to England. Weltden arrived the next day at Madras, and on the 26th was told that the Company had no further occasion for his ship and that he was free to trade in the country.

The consequences of his expedition to Siam were not so easily dismissed. A long and acrimonious discussion was raised at home, which lasted many years. Samuel White and his brother Thomas denounced the whole proceedings to Parliament as unjustifiable and treacherous, while the Company accused Weltden of remissness and neglect, and declared that he had been corrupted by Mr. White's arts.

For two years after his adventure in Siam, Captain Weltden continued to trade in the Eastern Seas.¹ The Curtana is mentioned more than once by Dampier, who set out for Tonquin with Captain Weltden in July, 1688, and returned with him in the following April to Achin. But in 1690 Dampier learnt that the Curtana had been sold to the Mogul's subjects, and with this Captain Weltden for many years passes out of the pages of history.

We can hardly doubt that Weltden at this time abandoned the sea and returned to England, where his presence was necessary to protect his conduct and interests involved in the unfortunate proceedings at Mergui. Besides Anthony Weltden had not after all done so badly. In some way or other he had acquired enough to marry and settle down upon a small estate of his own at Well in Lincolnshire.¹ In 1703, the business of the Curtana was at last settled, and the result communicated to Weltden.² In 1706, his general position is sufficiently indicated by a will which he made on the 28th May, in which he provides for his wife, daughter, and three sons. He leaves £2,000 to his daughter Mary on her attaining the age of 24 years; £1,500 each to his sons, George and Henry, on their attaining the age of 24 years; and his landed estate in the county of Lincoln to his eldest son Anthony. He leaves £250 per annum to his wife, Mary Weltden, while she remains a widow, also one-third of his estate, and the mansion at Wellen for her residence. His wife, Mary Weltden, is left executrix, and George Townsend of Lincoln's Inn and his kinsman, Henry Weltden of Thornby, Northamptonshire, are trustees.³

It is clear that soon after this Anthony Weltden must have become dissatisfied with his position and anxious to make still better provision for his growing family by once more going abroad and seeking a fortune in the East. He therefore applied to the Company to be appointed chief of their affairs in the Bay of Bengal. The occasion was favourable. The Directors were thoroughly dissatisfied with the rotation government in Bengal, and were resolved to replace the management of their affairs in the hands of a single president.

On the 11th November 1709, the Court proceeded to the selection of a fit person to fill the restored office. Their choice lay between four candidates. Of these three, Ralph Sheldon, Jonathan Winder and Robert Hedges were old and approved servants of the Company. The fourth was Captain Anthony Weltden, a man of doubtful antecedents, with no experience of Bengal; yet, through private influence, or perhaps by reason of his very inexperience, as one who was quite free from all connection with the recent disputes between the officers of the Old and the New Companies, he secured the majority of votes in the ballot, which took place and was declared the Company's president in Bengal.⁴ He was ordered to take his passage in the King William galley, and began without delay his preparations for the voyage. These seem to have been somewhat extensive, as, besides his wife, he carried with him to India his sister, his daughter, and son, with two maids and a man servant. The luggage of the family consisted of nine tons of clothes, one ton of books, another of linen, a barrel of pewter, a bundle of bedding, six cases or small tubs of provisions, four hampers of cider, ten chests of beer, about the same quantity of wine, an escrutoire, a harpsichord in a case, and 4,000 pounds of bullion.¹ The King William galley left Portsmouth on Tuesday, the 7th February, 1710, and arrived at the Cape of Good Hope on Wednesday, the 10th May, whence Weltden sent to his masters in London a letter full of professions of duty.² "We might have been here sooner," he wrote, "had we not met with great calms and small winds near the equinoctial, which continued with us four or five weeks. Your servants aboard the King William are all in health and good order, your soldiers likewise. When we came near this place we had strong winds and thick weather with a great sea whereby we lost our main and mizen top masts. At that time we concluded to go by the Cape and proceed directly for Bengal but our course in a few hours was stopped by great rains and a south-east wind, which caused us to put for the port; and here we arrived the next evening. Your ship King William proves very strong, tight, and a great sailer. We hope to go from here on Tuesday next, the 16th, and according to orders shall make the best of our way for the Bay, where I hope to act for you faithfully and diligently."

Towards the middle of July, 1710, the King William galley reached Bengal. On the 18th of the month a letter was received in Calcutta from Weltden announcing his arrival at Balasor. Samuel Blount, a member of the Council, was at once sent down the river with a letter of congratulation and various conveniences for the president and his family, and many others besides hastened, of their own accord, to meet their new chief. On the 19th Weltden with his family embarked on the Mary buoyer under a salute of 21 guns, and on the evening of the 20th July he reached Calcutta. He was "met at his landing by most of the Europeans in the town and the natives in such crowds that it was difficult to pass to the fort, where he was conducted by the Worshipful John Russell and Abraham Adams, Esquires, and the Council. The packet was opened and the commission read, after which the usual ceremony given on such occasions by firing guns, and the keys of the fort delivered."³

³ See Summaries, § 391, in the first volume of this work; also the log of the King William in the addenda to this volume.

The records are provokingly reticent with regard to the doings of the Weltden family in Calcutta. I should have liked to know whether the harpsichord arrived safely, how they managed to tune it, what the ladies thought of Miss Weltden's new frocks, and how the English servants liked their life in a steamy Bengal factory. But of all this there is nothing. We can hardly doubt that Weltden as a stranger and interloper was not popular, and hence what little we do hear of him is not in his favour. His administration seems to have left only three traces behind it of any permanent nature. He began the construction of some buildings on the river front by which the fourth side of the fort was completed;¹ he appointed his son Edward an ensign in the garrison;² and he gained for himself a reputation for corruption, which was long afterwards remembered in Calcutta. As Alexander Hamilton tells us, "His term of governing was very short, but he took as short a way to be enriched by it by harassing the people to fill his coffers. Yet he was very shy in taking bribes, referring those honest folks who trafficked that way to the discretion of his wife and daughter, to make the best bargain they could about the sum to be paid and to pay the money into their hands."³

On the 4th March, 1711,⁴ the Success arrived with a packet from England in which Weltden's commission was revoked and Ralph Sheldon was appointed president with John Russell as second and Robert Hedges as third. Sheldon being dead the succession fell to Russell to whom on the 7th March the late governor gave up the Company's cash, the balance being Rs. 61,200-7-9. The Council made him a sufficient allowance for board and lodging, while he remained at Calcutta to complete the business transactions by which he hoped to make a new fortune in the East. At the end of the year, the Weltden family returned to England on the Sherborne.⁵

CHAPTER II.

THE VOYAGE OF THE SHERBORNE.

THE ship on which the discredited governor and his family intended to make their passage to England had brought out to India a far greater than Anthony Weltden. In January, 1712, few people in Calcutta paid much attention to William Hamilton, the runaway Scotch doctor whom the council had recently appointed second surgeon. Yet of all the Company's servants at this time it is his name alone that is preserved in the history of British India as the great benefactor of the English in Bengal. Thus the narrative of the return of President Weltden and the homeward voyage of the Sherborne must be postponed in favour of the far more important story of the outward voyage of the Sherborne and early career of Dr. William Hamilton.

William Hamilton was a cadet of the noble family of the Hamiltons of Dalzell, which traced its origin to Gavin, third son of James, Lord Hamilton in the fifteenth century.¹ Fifth in descent from him was James Hamilton of Dalzell, who married Jean the daughter of Sir John Henderson of Fordell, by whom he had a large family. His large estates, secured to him in 1663 by a charter under the seal of Charles II, were divided at his death in 1688, and the farm of Boggs, or Boogs, in the parish of Bothwell, Lanarkshire, fell to his third son, James.²

Of this James, the first of the house of Boggs little is recorded, but of his only son John we are told that he was "persecuted for his religious opinions" which were displeasing to the Episcopalian Government of the restored Stuarts, and was "brought to much trouble for refusing to take the test."³ To John of Boggs were born seven sons, of whom the second William was destined to become famous in the annals of British ² See Douglas's Baronage, I, 464. Douglas, however, erroneously makes John of Boggs, the son of James of Dalzell whereas he was the grandson. This mistake is corrected by Anderson.

India and to "raise his name to the four quarters by curing the King of Kings."¹ Beyond his parentage we know nothing certain of William Hamilton's early life. His boyhood was probably passed at Bothwell, then even more than now the garden of Scotland, a swelling stretch of yellow farmland, shaded by green groves and orchards, sloping from the upland braes to the murmuring Clyde. The son of a Covenanting and persecuted father he was no doubt early imbued with the political and religious tenets of the extreme Presbyterians, and must have often listened to the story of their sufferings, how they had fought in vain against Monmouth and Claverhouse at the narrow bridge of Bothwell and had fled to hide themselves in the dens and caves of the earth. As a young man he may have entered the University of Glasgow, and perhaps it is his name which appears among the signatures to a protest, drawn up in 1696, denouncing conspiracies against the life of William III, and promising to avenge the King's death should he die by violence.² With more likelihood

1. James, his heir ; 2. William, who was in the navy service ; 3. Daniel, a major in the army ; 4. Alexander, master of a trading vessel to the West Indies ; 5. David, master of a trading vessel to the coast of Guinea ; 6. Thomas, a surgeon at Bath ; and 7. John, a Colonel in Major Hamilton's battalion. William Hamilton in his will, dated the 27th October, 1719, describes his father as "my honourable father, John Hamilton of Boogs in the parish of Bothwell."

² Unfortunately the rolls of alumni in Scotch Universities do not seem to record the father's name so it is impossible to identify William Hamilton satisfactorily with any particular student. The librarian of the University of St. Andrews has kindly given me the following entries :—"1694, Mar. 30. St. Leonard's College (Matriculated) G. Hamiltone, and 1699, Feb. 22, St. Leonard's College (Matriculated) Gnl Hamiltone. The Christian names are supposed to be in Latin." The Assistant Clerk of the Edinburgh University tells me that "There was a William Hamilton attending the University in 1694." The Clerk of the Senate of the University of Glasgow wrote to me very kindly as follows :—"The name is a common one and occurs several times in the University lists of students circa 1700, but without sufficient particulars for identification. The name William Hamilton occurs in a list of students under Professor Carmichael, 1696, in a list of students under Professor Law 1707 ; as the holder of the Hyndford Bursary, 1707 ; in a list of students under Professor Dunlop, 1708 ; and in a list of Laureati (those who received degrees in Arts), 1710 ; as well as in the list of students of Theology, 1698 and 1703. Professor Carmichael taught Moral Philosophy ; Professor Law, Philosophy ; and Professor Dunlop, Greek. The name also occurs in a list of students who (among others) signed a bond in 1696 protesting against conspiracies menacing the life of King William, and engaging the signatories to avenge his death should he die by violence." The name of William Hamilton is not found at this early date on the rolls of the Royal Colleges of Physicians or of Surgeons in Edinburgh. Of course it is quite possible that our William Hamilton like his great uncle Sir David Hamilton the Court Physician, studied medicine abroad at Leyden or Rheins, or some other continental school.

The Album Studiorum Academiae Lugoduno Bataviae records the names of two William Hamiltons, about whom the archivaris Profr. Dr. Muller has given me the following details :—

- (a) Hamilton, Gulielmus, Scotus, inscribed the 30th September 1701, then 22 years old. Left in 1703 without a degree.
- (b) Hamilton, Wilhelmus Scotus, inscribed the 27th August 1704, then 23 years old, living at the house of Dirock Kor in 1705, 1706. Left without a degree.

it may be conjectured that he became attached to his cousin Anna, the daughter of Robert Hamilton of Wishaw,¹ and, in the hope of speedily gaining enough to marry on bade good-bye to home and country and went "to make the crown a pound" in the distant east.

At any rate the earliest mention of William Hamilton in the India Office records occurs under the date of the 12th November, 1709, when he signed a receipt for £ 7, being two months impress paid him in advance for his services as Surgeon of the frigate Sherborne.²

For a young doctor thus to begin his professional career with a voyage to India was by no means uncommon; but the peculiar characters of William Hamilton and of his commander Henry Cornwall led in this instance to unexpected issues. If the few indications now left us are to be trusted, William Hamilton was a man of great and unmistakable ability with an insight into character which gained him influence over his fellow men, but he was wanting in ambition and hopefulness, and his strength of will varied. Between Hamilton and Cornwall there was a most wonderful contrast of character. While Hamilton had ability without self-assertion, Cornwall had self-assertion, without ability. A man of good family, with a disposition, honest, energetic, and persevering, he had no tact, no self-control, no insight into character; always believing himself in the right he was generally in the wrong. About the year 1700, he had left the navy in which he had been employed for twelve years,³ and entered the service of the East India Company, where through the influence of his great friends he had hoped for speedy promotion. In this hope he was disappointed. For several years he was left unnoticed among the sea-faring men at Madras,⁴ the captain perhaps of some small local ship, and became involved with a certain Elizabeth Browne, whom he in the end promised to marry expecting through her to get preferment in England.⁵ Her recommendations, however, proved of little avail. Returning home in 1707, Cornwall found great difficulty in getting any employment, married, ran into debt, and was at last glad to find himself in command even of a small ship.⁶

The Sherborne was a frigate of only 250 tons, carrying twenty-two guns.¹ In September, 1709, she had been taken up for a pepper voyage² and was with such hesitation despatched to Bencoolen. On the 11th January, 1710, a muster was taken by Mr. Blakeley at Portsmouth, and the ship's Company returned as consisting of 52 officers and seamen and 19 soldiers.³ Leaving England some time in February the Sherborne arrived at Bencoolen after an uneventful voyage of some six months. On the 7th August she left bound for the east coast of India.⁴ The evil fate which pursued Captain Cornwall throughout his life now overtook him. As men then reckoned, the Sherborne was a small ship of little defence, a heavy sailer and indifferently manned;⁵ and her crew had been brought to the verge of mutiny by the harsh treatment they had received from their Captain who caned or whipped them for the slightest faults.⁶ On the 1st September, the ship was sailing along the shoaling coast of Ceylon. The weather was fine and the lead was kept going, when at six o'clock in the evening, the ship, with all sails standing, struck in nine fathoms of water upon a spit of sand at Mullaittivu to the north of Trincomalee, eighty miles from Point Pedro.⁷ According to one account every effort was made to get the ship off, but it seems clear that the men cared little what became of her. At midnight her captain left her to seek help from strangers. After twenty-three hours in an open boat Cornwall landed at Point Pedro, and made his way to Jaffnapatam.⁸ Here he was kindly received by the Dutch governor who sent him back with as many sloops as could be spared.⁹ Meanwhile the crew had deserted the ship.

⁴ See a letter from Fort St. George dated 27th December 1710 in the India Office. The Sherborne had on board as a passenger Mr. Harrison who afterwards became Governor of Fort St. George.

Meeting their captain as he was returning from Jaffnapatam, the mutineers told him that he need trouble himself no more about the Sherborne; her decks had fallen and she was broken to pieces.¹ Not a man would consent to return to his duty till he had received his discharge,² and it was only with the assistance of the Dutch that the ship was on the 8th September got clear of the sand, and brought to anchor off Point Pedro. She was found to have sustained comparatively little damage, but it was agreed on all hands that the safest course now left was to sail straight for Bengal.³ On arriving in the Hugli at the beginning of October the crew would have again deserted had not the Council at Fort William in response to the urgent representations of the Captain sent strict orders to every officer and every man to obey his commander and do his duty. Undersuch compulsion the ship was brought up the river to Calcutta by the 16th October. A protracted enquiry was held into the mutinous conduct of the crew and many of the officers and men were examined. They refused to serve under Cornwall any longer, and the Council, knowing that it would be impossible to reman the ship, was afraid to proceed to extremities. At length on the 26th October, having received promises of better treatment from Cornwall, they consented to go on board again, all except the second mate John Cooke and he was ordered to be sent to England for punishment.⁴

But this apparent settlement of the quarrel did not secure approval from the Court at home who sympathised with the men, nor did it meet with much success in Calcutta.⁵ In the end most of the men deserted, and when the Sherborne arrived at Madras in February, 1711, she had on board out of her complement of fifty only nineteen men and boys. Peremptory orders were given to make up the full number, and on the 3rd March, the Sherborne was despatched with reinforcements to Cuddalore and Fort St. David where the English were engaged in hostilities with the Rajah of Jingi.⁶

What share had Hamilton taken, up to the present time, in dispute between Cornwall and the crew? It would be difficult for a man of his ability to tolerate the pig-headed Captain, but it was certainly his interest to do so. Did he then openly side with the men, or did he keep quiet? It would seem that hitherto he had patiently endured. His name was not mentioned at the enquiry into the mutiny held in Calcutta. He did not desert his post with the faithless majority. He went with his ship from Calcutta to Madras and from Madras to Cuddalore. There for the first time, as far as we know, his patience gave way and he tried to leave the Sherborne.

It was suggested in March by the authorities at Fort St. David that the services of Dr. Hamilton were required ashore, but Cornwall protested so vigorously that the suggestion was dropped.¹ Farmer, the Deputy Governor of Fort St. David, forbade him to quit his post, but the third in the Council, Baker, was more favourably disposed. On the evening of the 3rd May, 1711, the Doctor informed Baker that the government had given him permission to go to Madras, and in confirmation produced a letter from his kinsman Captain Hamilton. On this Baker not only gave him leave but furnished him with the means to go. That night William Hamilton took his fate in his hands, deserted his duty, and made his escape to Madras in a country boat under a false pretence. Captain Cornwall reported the desertion to the Council of Fort St. George in a letter which bears evident trace of his violent temper. "Last night my Surgeon Alexander Hamilton,"—the captain was too angry to remember his doctor's correct name, "made his escape in a boat from Cuddalore, producing a letter from Captain Hamilton to Mr. Baker, wherein was inserted he had leave from the Governor of Fort St. George to proceed forthwith to that place, and that Governor Fraser and his Council had written to Governor Farmer to that effect, Mr. Baker having inclined to act contrary to Governor Farmer's order, gave him leave, and assisted him with a boat, so I presume before this arrives he'll be incognito according to Captain Hamilton's directions; perhaps his ship may be thought the securest place or so . . . that part I must refer to your Hon^r & C^a Council, and cant omitt saying yor Hon^{rs} countenance to this Vile fellow has occasioned this proceed^s. Hon^r &c^a approve the same that there may be no pretensions for any other Nation to carry him off. I humbly request y^r notes may be writt In several Languages all the gentlemen here may judge of my treatment to him and what Liberties he had to serve himself—y^{or} Hon^r &c^a have already received a protest upon this man's acco^t from all my ships Company they will certainly prefer the same. So I hope Your Hon^r &c^a will seriously consider this, and of what consequence it may be. I hear there is several Surgeons at Madrass I had much rather have any than him, but without one my people will be very much dissatisfied and not without reason this comes in some hast so I hope Y^{or} Hon^r will pardon.¹

In consequence of this letter the Council of Fort St. George sent for Dr. William Hamilton on the 7th May and ordered him to prepare to go on board the Sherborne as soon as she returned to Madras. But there is no evidence that he ever obeyed this order. On the contrary he probably continued his flight from Madras to Calcutta.

In the ledger of the Sherborne the account of William Hamilton, "Chyrurgion," is closed with the scornful word "run," and his life's reckoning might well have closed with the same shameful entry, were it not that the divine accountant is more long suffering than man. Hamilton lived to rue bitterly the false step he had taken, for in leaving his ship he left for ever home and country, father and kindred, and all that might have been, had he returned to marry his Anna and make his name as a great doctor in the land of his birth. Yet he lived to wipe out the memory of his false step by actions which brought lasting benefit to his nation, for from the hour of his leaving the Sherborne he belongs for ever to British India. On the 27th December, 1711, William Hamilton was appointed second surgeon at Calcutta.

Meanwhile Anthony Weltden was stowing goods on the Sherborne and making final preparations to leave Calcutta. The little ship could hardly find room enough for her cargo. The Company's goods, valued at £42,000, filled some 550 or 560 bales; Weltden's clothes, linen, and various stores for the voyage were stowed in the sail room in some forty chests; and the guard room had to be enlarged from the bulk heads of the gun room to the after hatchway to take in what remained.² Thus heavily laden the Sherborne began her last fatal voyage on the 7th January, 1712.³

She was ordered to sail in company with the St. George but on Wednesday, the 13th February she was separated from her consort in a storm. She was then west of Ceylon in the latitude of eight degrees south. Two months later¹ off the Cape of Good Hope she met three French men of war from Toulon commanded by Monsieur Roquemador to whom she fell an easy prey and was carried off to the Isle de Bourbon. One of the French ships, the Adelaide, had lost her main mast and it was thought best to send her back to France with the bulk of the captured goods and Governor Weltden, while the Sherborne, now styled the Charbon, with the other two ships returned to India.

At the end of the year 1712, the Adelaide reached Port Louis in France. On the 20th January, 1713,² the Sherborne was condemned as lawful prize by the Admiralty Court of Vannes, and her goods adjudicated to the Sieur de Crozat, by whom the three privateers had been fitted out. The English Company had made great efforts to redeem the goods, but, as what they had bought in India for some £42,000 was in France estimated to worth at least £1,50,000, the negotiations fell through.³

Weltden, who remained for nearly three months at Port Louis trying to recover his effects, which he valued at £15,000, arrived in Paris about the end of March, 1713,⁴ and thence returned to England, where he demanded compensation of the Company. In October, 1714, after considerable delay, his demands were submitted to arbitration, and on the 5th November he was awarded £1,200 in satisfaction of all claims.⁵ On the 12th January, 1715, he wrote from Winchester Street to tell the secretary to the Company that he was in great pain from gout and could not come in person, as he had intended, to receive his money.⁶ In March, as we learn from the second codicil to his will, he was in great distress of mind owing to the misconduct of his daughter Mary who had married a Mr Griffin, a man with another wife still living, as her father feared.⁷ On the 13th March, Anthony Weltden died in London, and was buried at Well, in Lincolnshire, on the 24th. Here too his wife was buried in 1717,⁸ and the property soon passed into other hands.⁹

CHAPTER III.

THE END OF THE WAR WITH FRANCE.

THE Court of Directors had no knowledge of Weltden's alleged malpractices when they sent out the orders and instructions in consequence of which John Russell became President and Governor of Fort William. The reasons which they assigned for the change were that they wished to give their servants all reasonable encouragement to the faithful, active and zealous, and that they thought Mr. Sheldon had not been so kindly dealt with. "The good account we have had of Mr. Sheldon's general character," they wrote, "and regard to his long service in India has prevailed with us to make this alteration. We had this further view therein and in making Mr. Russell second, to encourage all our servants to persevere in well doing with the hopes that if by their standing and merit they rise to or bear the top of our service and are deserving, they shall not have others placed over them."¹ The instructions given to Weltden were repeated and particularly recommended to his successor, and it was laid down as a general rule that the President was to take more than ordinary care that all the Company's orders were observed and that all under him did their duty in their different stations.²

Thus by the rule of seniority John Russell became Governor of Fort William. Yet he was not without claims to a leading position, for his family was ancient and honourable.¹ His grandfather, Sir Francis Russell, third baronet, was the eldest son and heir of William Russell of Chippenham, Cambridgeshire, created first baronet in 1629. His father was Sir John Russell, fourth baronet, and his mother Frances, the youngest and favourite daughter of Oliver Cromwell. John the third and posthumous son was born in London on the 4th October 1670.² On the 22nd November, 1693, he was elected a factor for the East India Company³ and arrived in this capacity in Bengal, on the 3rd December 1694. On the 17th December,⁴ 1697, he married his first wife Rebecca, the sister of Governor Eyre,⁵ by whom he had one son and three daughters. On the 2nd February, 1704, he was appointed fourth in the United Company's Council,⁶ and on the 26th April, 1709, succeeded Sheldon as Chairman for the Old Company.⁷ On the 20th July, 1710, in conjunction with Abraham Adams, he made over to Weltden⁸ the government which he now resumed with undivided authority after an interval of seven and-a-half months.

The war of the Spanish Succession had now entered upon its final stage. October, 1710, had witnessed the fall of the Whigs, and by the end of the year, 1711, Marlborough was dismissed from the great office of Captain General. The whole policy of the new Tory Government was directed to speedy termination of hostilities. But the end was not as yet and the consequences of the struggle were still felt from time to time in Calcutta during the first two years of Russell's administration.

The year 1711 opened with an alarm at Calcutta that the French were in the Bay. At this time shipping, with the exception of the King William, was at the mouth of the river on the point of sailing for England. On the night of the 3rd December a letter came from Balasor with the news that four French men-of-war were at anchor in the road and that three more ships supposed to be prizes, had been seen in the offing. The Council and the Company's captains in Calcutta were hastily summoned, and orders were sent off recalling all the ships from Saugor up into the river and warning them to prepare for a possible attack.¹ The French, however, did not care to trust their ships in so dangerous a river as the Hugli, and they soon withdrew southward along the coast. By the middle of January, the alarm they caused had died away. The smaller ships, the Bouverie and the Sherborne were sent to Madras, while the Susanna and the King William were sent directly to England.² None of these ships fell a prey to the French in this year. In October the English had the good fortune to recapture one of the enemy's prizes,³ but in December, news came from Madras that on the other side of India, the Dutchess had been taken.⁴ The French, it was said, gave out that they intended to return to Pondicherry. When last seen, however, on the 20th December, they were off Mangalore and appeared to be proceeding to Mocha.⁵

The most disgraceful loss of the year was the capture of the Jane at Rio de Janeiro. This vessel, a small frigate of 180 tons, with 36 men and 20 guns,⁶ had sailed from England for Bencoolen in April, 1711,⁷ having on board Mr. John Collett, the Deputy Governor of that factory. She also carried one of the earliest contributions made by the English to the missionary cause in the east, 1,500 copies of St. Matthew's Gospel in Portuguese, catechetical and practical books for the use of the missionaries at Tranquebar and the chaplains at Madras, Calcutta, and Bombay, a printing press, types, and paper, and a printer, Mr. Jonas Finck.⁸ In August, her Captain, John Austin, "on pretence of want of provision and to refresh her men," but in reality for the sake of his own private trade, put in at Rio de Janeiro.⁹ Here he loitered about in spite of ample warnings till the 1st September, when Monsieur de Guay with fifteen sails of men-of-war frigates and two bomb vessels entered the harbour. The 7,000 Portuguese who should have defended the place abandoned it straightway to the enemy. Of the newly arrived Lisbon fleet three ships were burnt, and the fourth ran ashore. In three days the French were absolute masters of the town, and had gathered a rich harvest of plunder. Captain Austin, after refusing to land the Company's treasure and secure it in the country, as he did his own, though he lay so far up the river that the French never offered to attack him, sent off his mate in a boat and shamefully surrendered his ship without so much as a summons, and after taking bills upon England for his own money returned to France with the French squadron. Collett, after a fortnight of vain attempts to purchase another vessel, on which to continue his voyage, found that he could redeem the Jane and her cargo for £3,500, which he was glad to do. In May, 1712, he reached Madras having touched at the Cape on his way, and brought with him the news that there were hopes of peace.

Formal negotiations had, in fact, been opened at Utrecht in January, 1712. On the 11th August, a cessation of arms was agreed upon, and might have been agreed upon earlier, had it not been for the absurd quarrel between footmen of Count Rechteren and of Monsieur Mesnager, which held all the affairs of Europe in suspense and furnished numerous topics for "Coffee-house Debates."¹ But the cessation of arms, as we have seen, came too late to save the Sherborne, and later on in the year Monsieur Crozat's privateers, appearing in the Bay of Bengal nearly succeeded in capturing another of the Company's ships.

In September news was received in Calcutta that the three French ships were cruising off Point Palmiras, and measures had to be devised to warn Madras and prevent the English merchantmen expected in the Bay from being surprised.² For this purpose the Russell galley, "a good sailing vessel just in her ballast, . . . with a good look out kept at the top-mast-head," was sent out over the Braces and along the coast, a voyage which at this season "might be performed in twelve days."³ At one time the Calcutta government even contemplated fitting out a squadron, in conjunction with the Dutch, "to clear these parts of the French;" but the Dutch refused to co-operate.⁴ Neither was the mission of the Russell galley successful, for she herself was speedily captured,⁵ and in any case her warnings would have come too late.

The galley had been sent off on the 5th September; on the 4th of the French privateers had already fallen in with their prey. It was the English build of the Sherborne, aided by a false show of English colours which nearly led to the capture of the Marlborough off the Black Pagoda. The story of the encounter is set down with full nautical detail in the ship's log. At first Matthew Martin, the Captain of the Marlborough, though not trusting the false colours, allowed the Sherborne to come close up to the leeward, and sent his yawl towards the Eclatant to discover what ship it was. As the boat put off, the Eclatant furled her sprit sail, and showed her broadside with the lower tier of ports open. Martin, recalling the yawl, and cutting away some small boats, tacked and stood off. At half past one in the afternoon the Eclatant and the Sherborne hoisted French colours and gave chase. The Marlborough was then within half gun-shot distance of them, but her captain was determined to show a clean pair of heels. He ordered every thing that might encumber the working of the ship to be bore overboard, and himself set the example by sacrificing his own goods to considerable value. Yet the Sherborne kept abreast of the Marlborough, firing briskly into her, while the Eclatant, on her weather quarter, bore under her stern, and tried to rake her fore and aft. Martin, having cleared the decks, replied to the Sherborne with his broadside, and to the Eclatant with his stern chase. Whenever the breeze sprang up it appeared that the Marlborough was a better sailer than any of the French ships, and she drew away out of gunshot. But when the wind dropped, the Frenchman, getting out his boats, managed to tow the Eclatant close up to the English ship. This manoeuvre was twice defeated. On the second occasion the Eclatant and the Marlborough were hotly engaged from 9 to 11 in the morning of Friday, the 5th September. "Then a small gale sprang up and towing with our pinnace ahead we outsailed him." It began to look black and squally. "The wind came to the East, East-North-East and round to the North-North-West with a great deal of rain. . . . In the afternoon it blew pretty fresh." So the Marlborough in the end shot clear of her pursuer, and, "keeping the wind," hauled in for the shore.

On Saturday the 6th the chase was renewed. Martin lost some time in trying to find an entrance to the Obilka lake which he mistook for a bay. The French ships came on, making all the sail they could, but the Marlborough standing close into the shore kept well out of reach. That night Martin put a pole, with a candle and lantern at the end of it, into a well-balasted half tub, and sent it astern to amuse the French. The next day a west wind carried them out to sea, and all sight of enemy was lost. The Court of Directors presented the captain of the Marlborough with a medal, but they complained to Russell about the loss of the galley, for which they were unwilling to pay.¹

The news of the peace of Utrecht, signed on the 11th April 1713 (N. S.), was sent to Bengal "by a Dutch conveyance" in a letter dated the 24th April (O. S.), and must have reached Calcutta in less than four months, for in August three French ships sailed up the Hugli, and on the 27th their commodore dined with the Governor and Council at Calcutta, "and returned Thanks for the assistance of the English Pylots and the Sloops (that belonged to private people), who brought him up to Rogues river."² Henceforth for many years to come there was peace and amity between English and French, only disturbed occasionally by a quarrel about salutes³ or an alarm of renewed hostilities.⁴

CHAPTER IV.

FIGHTING FOR THE CROWN OF INDIA.

THE war with the French, limited as it was at this time in India to the sea, did not after all greatly concern the merchants in Calcutta, who were in fact far more jealous of their Dutch allies than of their French enemies. Much more keenly concerned were the English in Bengal at the quarrels and contests which took place on land between the different Indian princes and rulers.

About the same time as Russell became President, the English resettled the factory at Cassimbazar, where the buildings were fast falling into ruin.¹ Robert Hedges the second in the Council arrived in his new barge, about the middle of March, with Page, Stackhouse, and Ange, as his assistants.² The direction of the factory at Patna, a post of no small difficulty and danger, was undertaken by Pattle.³ For his second he was given Browne. Crisp and Pratt were sent up with him to learn the country language and to qualify themselves for the Company's service.⁴ In compliance with directions received from home the Council made an effort at retrenchment. They reduced the pay of the river pilots and dismissed a number of soldiers and other subordinates.⁵ They anticipated peace, but, while they were thinking of it, the forces of unrest in India were making ready for the battle.

On his return to Bengal at the end of the year 1710, as Treasurer and Deputy Governor, Murshid Qulī, or, as history now begins to call him, Ja'far Khān, found himself in point of fact the supreme authority in the Lower Provinces. The nominal governor was Prince 'Azīmu-sh-shān, Bāhādur Shāh's second son; but he was away with his father at Lahor, his attention being wholly absorbed in the struggle with the rebellious Sikhs and in the advance of his own interests. For, though only the second son, yet as the favourite adviser and chief agent of the sovereign, as well as the ruler of the richest province in the empire, he seemed at one time the most likely successor to the throne. His kindness of heart had secured him some devoted adherents. In Bengal he was represented by his son Prince Farrukhsiyar, a young man of twenty-eight, whom he disliked and distrusted, and by Khān Jahān Bāhādur, 'Izzu-d-daulah, a disagreeable and conceited fellow upon whose forlorn condition at Delhi 'Azīmu-sh-shān had taken pity, and for whom he had with difficulty procured the offices of governor of Orissa and of deputy under Farrukhsiyar. This Khān Jahān Bāhādur arrived in Rājmahal at the beginning of June, 1711,¹ where he seems to have done his best to ingratiate himself with the English by allowing their salt-petre boats to pass safely down the river and by granting them an order for free trade;² but his authority was of little account. Nearer home the English had for the time a far more powerful friend Zeyāu-d-dīn Khān, the imperial admiral and governor of Hugli, whom they constantly consulted in their diplomatic relations, and through whom they were negotiating for rescripts from the emperor and for letters patent from Prince 'Azīmu-sh-shān.³ But in September, 1711, in accordance with the representations of Ja'far Khān, who was jealous of an independent government in Bengal, Zeyāu-d-dīn was deprived of his offices⁴ and Wali Beg was placed in charge of Hugli.⁵

The English were thus left without any help face to face with their old enemy, the redoubtable Ja'far Khān. As soon as they heard of his arrival at Murshidābād they wrote him a "complimenting" letter telling him that Mr. Hedges, the Chief of the Cassimbazar factory, would shortly wait upon him;⁶ but he was not to be softened by polite attentions. He demanded large sums of money from the English, and did his best to stop all their boats and business.¹ By the end of July, 1711, the Calcutta council lost all patience. They ordered their representative at Cassimbazar to inform Ja'far Khān that, since he would consent to no moderate terms, they would seize the Mogul ships passing Fort William, would report him to the emperor, and would withdraw their factory from Cassimbazar.² These threats had the usual effect. Ja'far Khān became more conciliatory. In October he proposed to grant a pass to the English for their trade in the Lower Provinces and to procure imperial rescript and letters patent for the same on consideration of 30,000 rupees to be paid on receipt of his pass and 23,500 on receipt of the rescripts. With this offer the English thought it best to close.³

At the same time they had not given up their purpose of applying directly to Delhi for the confirmation and extension of their commercial privileges. The present which Governor Pitt had originally got together to send to the Mogul had been transferred to Calcutta, and it was now proposed that a great embassy should go with it from Bengal to the imperial court, should represent the grievances of the English Company in the Bay and on the Coromandel and Malabar Coasts, and should secure imperial grants settling and Guaranteeing their position in every part of India.⁴ At the beginning of March, 1712,⁵ the present, which had been carefully revised, was lying packed in boats, ready to go up the river, and the Council was considering whom to send with it as ambassadors, when the news reached Calcutta that the emperor had died at Lahor.

The usual confusion followed. Ja'far Khān formed a great armed camp for his defence, mounted all his guns, put his elephants and horse soldiers in readiness and kept his foot in strict discipline, while Khān Jahān Bahādur, 'Izzu-d-daulah, fortified himself in Rajmahal as well as he could guarding all the neighbouring passes and intercepting all communications. The merchants followed suit. The Dutch sent down everything of value, treasure women and children, to Chinsurah, where a ship was kept at anchor to protect the factory.⁶ The English hired a number of "good people" to take care of their three towns, ordered the garrison of Fort William to be in readiness, mounted mortars and great guns on the curtains and bastions, and laid in provisions in case of a siege.¹

No one certainly knew who would succeed to the empire of India. Bāhādur Shāh, the last Mogul of any real ability, had left four sons to contend for the throne, feeble creatures, mere puppets in the hands of others, the victims of foolishness and factiousness, and the sport of Fortune, who in the end rejected them all in favour of the still feebler grandson of the emperor, Farrukhsiyar.² Yet at first it seemed as if 'Aẓīmu-sh-shān had the best chance. Enriched with the accumulated revenues of Bengal, and armed with the chief direction of the government, he had at his disposal all the resources of the empire, while his elder brother Jahāndār had neither money nor men. His two younger brothers, Jahān Shāh³ and Rafi'u-sh-shān, were not even spoken of as likely candidates for the throne. But even before his father's death the prospects of 'Aẓīmu-sh-shān had changed for the worse. Though capable of acts of kindness, he more usually showed himself selfish and avaricious. His manner was cold and forbidding: his policy dilatory and over-cautious. Conspicuous amongst the nobles who had pressed forward to offer their worship to the rising sun was Zū-l-fiqār Khān, the premier prince of the empire. 'Aẓīmu-sh-shān, filled with overweening pride had returned a curt and uncereimonious answer to his overtures, and the great noble with tears in his eyes had left the imperial guard room, and collecting his troops had moved over to the camp of the eldest son. A secret compact was formed between the three princes opposed to 'Aẓīmu-sh-shān. Zū-l-fiqār Khān swore that the spoils of the empire should be shared equally between them. So the two younger brothers made common cause with Jahāndār, and adventurers and soldiers now began to flock to the standard of one who had secured the support of the greatest of the Mogul generals. Accordingly when Bāhādur Shāh passed away on the afternoon of the 17th February, 1712, the tide of success had turned, and had begun to flow towards the elder brother.

At night 'Aẓīmu-sh-shān heard of his father's death. He shed a few tears; but there was no time left him for sorrow. The drums were beating in honour of his accession, and all those in attendance hastened to congratulate him. His friends urged him to secure the person of Zū-l fiqār Khān ; but he objected. One of the nobles, disregarding the prince's wishes, dashed off with a strong force to seize the disaffected general; but he came too late. Zū-l fiqār Khān had left the imperial enclosure. Still 'Aẓīmu-sh-shān was confident that all would be well, and took up his position on the Rāvi, a few miles to the north-east of the Shālihmar garden, where, protected by the river in his rear and by entrenchments on the other three sides, he intended to wait in security till his enemies dispersed. Zū-l fiqār Khān, however, devoted the next three days to cementing the alliance of the three princes, gathering troops, and bringing up artillery out of the fort. Jahāndār Shāh's camp extended between the city and the Shālihmar garden; to his left was Rafīu-sh-shān's army drawn up on the bank of the Rāvi: to his right Jahān Shāh who occupied a position near the tomb of Miyān Mir.

The three princes began to advance slowly towards 'Aẓīmu-sh-shān, who never left the shelter of his trenches. By the end of February they were close up to him, but 'Aẓīmu-sh-shān refused to enter the field. His frigid pride chilled the ardour of his followers. He disgusted the common soldiers by his parsimony and his generals by his reiterated orders to "wait a little longer." On the 3rd March¹ desultory fighting began which lasted three days, each side attacking the other with cannon fire and sallies of horse without any decided result, though there could be no doubt that the moral force was now on the side of Jahāndār Shāh. The troops of 'Aẓīmu-sh-shān had lost all spirit, and when on the 5th March² Zū-l-fiqār Khān artfully removed the guards placed over the ferries of the Rāvi, crowds of men made their escape by night from the trenches. On the 6th March³ a vigorous fight took place, in which the army of 'Aẓīmu-sh-shān was decisively defeated, and driven from the field, and his camp taken. Muḥammad Karīm, his eldest son, fled across the river and hid in the house of a poor weaver leaving his father with some 10,000 men still "waiting a little longer." In the night even these scanty forces deserted. Only a few remained faithful to 'Aẓīmu-sh-shān to the last; and they spent their time in watching and prayer, while the enemy's artillery flashed and thundered through the darkness.

² i.e., the 16th N. S.

³ i.e., 17th N. S. or 9th Şafar, 1125H. The Consultations book, Summaries, § 555 gives this date as the 5th March; but I followed Irvine.

At early dawn on the 7th¹ the drums beat to horse. The prince's own war elephant refused to let him mount, so another was brought for him to ride. About a thousand men still followed him, but they could see nothing owing to the clouds of sand which rose from the banks of the river. Suddenly some horsemen bore down upon them and let fly their arrows. A shot from a small field piece set fire to the cushions on the elephant of the prince, who threw them down, and called for men to charge Jahāndār Shāh. But they counselled immediate flight and began to make off. Then a ball from one of the great guns struck the elephant on its trunk. Wild with fright, it turned, and rushed at full speed towards the Rāvi. The driver fell; the attendant slipped off behind. The prince's followers galloped in pursuit hoping to stop the wretched animal; but before they could come up, it suddenly disappeared over the high bank of the stream, and, when they reached the edge, and looked down, they could see and hear nothing but the heaving and the roaring of the quick sand which had swallowed up elephant and prince together.

Prince Muḥammad Karīm did not long escape destruction. A short time after the tragic disappearance of 'Aẓīmu-sh-shān, a weaver presented himself in Lahor with a rich jewel which he offered to pawn. Its value excited suspicion; and on being questioned the poor man was forced to confess that he had received it from the prince who was hiding in his house. Muḥammad Karīm was forthwith seized and two days afterwards was executed in the house of Zū-l fiqār Khān.

Jahāndār Shāh now threw off all pretence of friendship with his younger brothers. For several days did their agents wait upon Zū-l fiqār Khān, demanding a division of the booty and of the kingdom, according to the terms of the compact. But Zū-l fiqār had forgotten all his oaths and all his promises. On various pretexts he put off the day of settlement, and soon made it clear that you could no more have two kings in one kingdom than two swords in one scabbard. The younger brothers, therefore, enlisted fresh troops and admitted to their service numbers of those who had fled at the defeat of 'Aẓīmu-sh-shān. Jahān Shāh determined to strike the first blow, and on the 15th March² threw himself upon Jahāndār. The next day the fight was renewed with great fury amidst clouds of dust. Neither army exactly knew the position of the other, and the battle resolved itself into a number of separate skirmishes. In one quarter Rustam Dil Khān fought his way to the elephant of Jahāndār Shāh who with more discretion than valour saved himself by hiding at the bottom of his iron-plated seat. In another quarter some matchlockmen, who were hiding in a small village, being suddenly set upon by Jahān Shāh with his son and a party of horsemen, fought so desperately for their lives that in the end the horse were forced to retire, leaving the two princes dead on the field. Thus just as Jahān Shāh was about to drain the cup of victory a chance shot dashed it from his lips.

Late in the night, on learning beyond all doubt that Jahāndār had conquered, Rafi'u-sh-shān sent him a message by a eunuch. The emperor and Zū-l-fiqār Khān were asleep. The eunuch was, therefore, forced to deliver his message to the king's foster brother. In reply he brutally showed the messenger the dead bodies of the two princes and threatened Rafi'u-sh-shān with the same fate. That unhappy prince could have no doubts left as to his elder brother's intentions. He called his chief men round him for a council of war; but they would decide on nothing except to wait for the dawn. When the day broke Rafi'u-sh-shān found that all men were deserting him. After a few weak efforts to resist the enemy's attacks, he jumped from his elephant and rushing sword in hand on the foe met death fighting bravely.

Tidings of these events made their way to Bengal during the months of March and April. At Murshidābad Ja'far Khān, as soon as he heard of the death of Bāhādur Shāh, had proclaimed 'Azīmu-sh-shān emperor and had ordered coin to be struck in his name. Soon uncertain rumours were circulated that a battle had taken place between him and Jahāndār, who was reported to have the greatest army and best troops. On the night of the 23rd March¹ it was known at Patna that 'Azīmu-sh-Shān had fallen, but it was still thought likely that Jahān Shāh might be able to secure the throne. "People are superstitious," says the record, "that Farrukhsiyar, if put to flight, will take this way, if his father be cut off as 'tis believed. It's reported that there is an army gone against him commanded by Zū-l-fiqār Khān and that Zabbardast Khān is appointed governor of Bengal."² At Murshidābād, however, this news was officially contradicted, and Ja'far Khān threatened death to any person who should presume to say that he did not believe that 'Azīmu-sh-shān

¹ i.e., the 3rd April N.S. Irvine says that Farrukhsiyar heard the news on the 6th April, but our records give the earlier date. See § 555.

was king. On the 27th March¹ Mr. Hedges sat with Ja'far Khān from 8 to 10 o'clock at night, when he talked about wars and battles. The inscription ordered by King 'Aẓīm-sh-shān to be stamped on the new coinage was produced and read to the English merchant before he left. "Be satisfied"; said Ja'far Khān, "all will be well. Take care of your factory, and go in peace."²

Meanwhile a new pretender to the throne had arisen. Farrukhsīyar, who had been summoned from Rājmaḥal to the North-West at the very beginning of the struggle was at Patna, when, on the 26th March,³ he received the news of his father's overthrow. Without resources or influence, he almost gave up hope. At one time he thought of suicide, at another time of flying to Calcutta and escaping by sea. But his mother, Ṣahebu-n-nissa, a native of Kaṣmīr, was one of those lion-hearted women of whom Indian history may be proud. If her son must needs try the sea, let it be the sea, not of water, but of battle. "Launch your bark upon the stormy water;" she said, "and if God be gracious to you, my son, you will reach the bank. After all what is life but a matter of a few days. Then, why not run the risk?" So Farrukhsīyar plucked up courage, proclaimed himself king, and set about finding friends to help him to the throne.

Among the many who had received benefits from the unfortunate 'Aẓīmu-sh-shāh were 'Abdu-llah and Ḥusain 'Alī, two brothers of the great Bāhrah family. Besides the prestige of their lineage, which they traced to Fatima the daughter of the Prophet, and the renown of their clan for valour and chivalry, they were sons of a man who, in the reign of Aurangzēb, had filled the highest offices, and was a distinguished adherent of Bāhādur Shāh. When that prince was contending for the throne, they had fought with conspicuous bravery on his side, but their high spirit gave offence, and neither the emperor, nor his vizier, nor Jahāndār showed them that consideration which their services merited. It was 'Aẓīmu-sh-shān who came forward as their friend and patron. As early as 1708, he nominated Ḥusain 'Alī to be his representative in Patna, and, at the beginning of 1711, he appointed 'Abdu-llah Khān governor of Allahabad. Such kindness made a deep impression on the generous nature of the two brothers. It was natural, then, that Ṣahebu-n-nissa when casting about for friends to support her cause should have applied to Ḥusain 'Alī for help. Even before she had received the news of her husband's death she had herself gone to Husain 'Alī to make him her friend and placing her own Qur'ān in his hands had sworn by it that he should never repent of helping her and had promised to place at his disposal all the affairs of the empire. When therefore the news came that 'Azīmu-sh-shān was dead and Jahāndār Shāh on the throne Husain 'Alī no longer hesitated what to do. He ordered public prayers to be made for 'Azīmu-sh-shān's son, coined money in the name of Farrukhsiyar, and displayed the standard of open war against Jahāndār Shāh.

At first no one seemed inclined to take the movement seriously. Ja'far Khān refused it his support, and men said that even Husain 'Alī would desert at the first opportunity. But it soon appeared that the new pretender and his general were in earnest. Forces were sent to Murshidābād to demand the treasure due to the Mogul. Vigorous measures were taken to fill every outpost with guards favourable to the new rule. In April it was resolved to put the city of Patna under contribution, and a list of rich men was drawn up at the head of which stood the English. They were also subjected to extensive demands on account of customs, said to be owing from the late reign, and a watch was set over the factory. It was only through the interposition of Husain 'Alī that they succeeded in escaping further molestation. In May, they withdrew to Singhiya for greater safety. In June, on the death of Mr. Vanhorne, the Dutch chief in Bihar, the pretender seized all his goods on the pretext that, as Vanhorne died without heirs, his property lapsed to the state. In the same month Robert Hedges with his assistants left Cassimbazar and came down to Calcutta. At this time the pretender was bent on sending a large force against the nabob, Ja'far Khān to reduce him to obedience, and wrote to the English at Calcutta, asking them to secure him with the treasure, should he take flight to them for protection,¹ a request which put them into no small difficulty. If they refused, or gave no reply, they would offend the pretender; if they consented, and their letter were intercepted, they would offend the nabob. So they diplomatically wrote back to Mr. Pattle at Singhiya, directing him to answer the pretender, acknowledging the honour of His Highness's letter, and expressing obedience to his commands.² Meanwhile at Delhi the whole government was in disorder. The new emperor was a cruel debauchee, without dignity, taste, or commonsense, who rapidly disgusted all his followers. The chief minister was at open strife with the emperor's foster brother. The young, inexperienced, prince A'zzu-d-dīn who had been sent against the pretender in Bengal had been placed under the guidance of two utterly incompetent men, who were certain to fail against the mighty Bāhrah brothers.

At Patna things were growing critical.¹ By September, it was known that the Emperor was at Delhi, and that a force under his son had advanced beyond Agra. In October, the pretender, straining every nerve to get money to pay his troops, extorted large sums of money from all the merchants. He forced the Dutch to pay him two lacs of rupees and demanded a similar sum of the English.² Husain 'Alī, however, who had steadily opposed him in his attempts to plunder the town exerted himself once again in favour of the English who were allowed to get off with a payment of 22,000 rupees.³

It was, in fact, high time for the pretender to think of more martial exploits than the harrying of merchants. For two months 'Abdu-llah, the governor of Allahabad had been eagerly expecting his brother Husain 'Alī to come to his aid with Farrukhśiyar, and had with difficulty driven off the attacks of the imperial army under A'zzu-d-dīn. The rains were now over, and the country was open for the movements of troops. Husain 'Alī, therefore, decided to march at once to join his brother. At the same time Jahāndār Shāh, alarmed at the repulse of his son, left the capital to march in person against the pretender to his throne. At Christmas, 1712, the two armies met near Agra. Jahāndār Shāh was defeated, and fled in disguise to Delhi. On the 27th January, 1713, his downfall was known in Calcutta.⁴ A few days later both he and his general Zū-l-fiqār were strangled by order of the conquerors. On the same day that the new emperor entered in triumph into the palace of the Moguls, the head of Jahāndār fixed on a spear, and his body thrown across an elephant, with the corps of Zū-l-fiqār tied to the tail, were carried round the city, and cast out before the main gate of the fort to rot.

CHAPTER V.

THE ADMINISTRATION OF JOHN RUSSELL.

RUSSELL's attitude towards the contending powers was one of sheer opportunism. It mattered nothing to him whether Tweedledum, or Tweedledee, sat on the throne as long as he could purchase piece goods at reasonable rates and convey saltpetre from Patna to Calcutta in safety. Unfortunately as we have seen, this was just what the local authorities would not allow. They took advantage of the unsettled state of the country to demand various aids and benevolences which the English merchants were most unwilling to give. Something had to be paid to secure the good will of the greedy Murshid Quli, something too to supply the necessities of the aspiring Farrukhsiyar; but on the whole the English under Russell did far better than the Dutch, who lost all their property in Bihar on the death of their agent Jacob Van Hoorn.

At one time, towards the end of the year, 1712 the action of Zeyāu-d-dīn Khān made an opportunist attitude a little difficult. The nephew of one of Aurangzeb's viziers and sole surviving representative of a great family,¹ was not likely to quietly accept his dismissal from his office of High Admiral. Instead of withdrawing from Bengal he remained at Hugli and raised a large force of armed men. He avowed himself a strong partizan of 'Azīmu-sh-shān and Farrukhsiyar, and in July, 1712, was "ready to come to battle" with Murshid Quli's representative, Walī Beg, who besought the English to come to his assistance.

The English, however, declared that they were merchants and could not concern themselves with such matters.¹ Yet later on in the year, Russell twice attempted to mediate between the two parties,² though without success, and the quarrel was not ended till April, 1713, when Zeyāu-d-dīn informed the English that he had been appointed treasurer of the western country near the coast of Coromandel. So the English made him present to the value of Rs. 1200, and lent him two small barges, and in June he took his departure to Patna.³

In the latter half of the year 1712, Calcutta was honoured by the presence of two embassies which halted there on their way to the Mogul's court. The King of Pegu's ambassador arrived on the 23rd August under a salute of thirty-one guns.⁴ A week later, news was brought that the Persian ambassador had arrived in the river on a Dutch ship. The Company's Persian writer was sent to wait on him with a letter of congratulation and the junior member of the Council met him at a distance of twelve miles from Calcutta.⁵ When he reached Govindpur, Governor Russell himself went off and attended him from thence up the river to the fort, where he was entertained with great respect. He was afterwards conducted to a house prepared for him in the town and provisions were ordered for him and his attendants.⁶ On the morning of the 3rd September "the Persian ambassador sent for the Governor and Council to dine with him and acquainted them that he kindly accepted of the provision which was made for him yesterday but would no longer be at the Company's charge."⁷ The next day the ambassador dined with Governor Russell and the Council at Fort William. He asked Russell's advice about proceeding to Hugli while it was disturbed by the dispute between Zeyāu-d-dīn and Wali Beg, and was advised to wait in Calcutta for the present for nearly three months in Calcutta.⁸ He did not leave for Hugli till the 18th November. On this occasion the English merchants made him a present "in cloth and varieties" to the amount of Rs. 1,500,⁹ which he evidently appreciated, for, in April 1713, when to leave Hugli for Delhi, he asked the English to send him "one piece of black cloth, 15 covids of fine lace, 3 fine hats, one black and the other two white, and a black periwig.”¹ In return for these courtesies the ambassador promised to do his utmost at Delhi for his Calcutta friends, and he carried with him a letter from Russell to the emperor setting forth the English grievances.²

The relations thus established by Russell with the country powers gave entire satisfaction to the Court of Directors, who held that it could never be amiss “to carry it fair to both parties” and “when it can be done so as not be discovered, to make them apprehend that you are always ready to do them service when in your power.”³ And such they declared was the policy of Sir Charles Eyre, Russell’s brother-in-law, who “did his business by good words and good correspondence and rarely paid a penny for it.”⁴

But a policy of fair words and opportunism was hardly worthy of a grandson of the great Oliver. The dealings of the English with the Maldivé Islands at the beginning of Russell’s administration seem more in accordance with the spirit of his grandfather. The story is obscure, as all mention of the matter was deliberately suppressed, but it appears that, about the beginning of the year 1711, the common fate of Oriental dynasties overtook Sultan Ibrāhim Mulhiru-d-dīn, the king of the Maldivé Islands.⁵ He had gone on a pilgrimage to Mecca. On his return he found that a subject Muhammad Imādu-d-dīn had usurped the throne and would not even let him set his foot on the jessamine-scented island of Mahe, where the Maldivé sultans resided. Coming to Bengal, Sultan Ibrāhim applied first to the Dutch, and afterwards to the English, to help him to recover his throne. The Dutch refused to meddle with the business. But the English first of all sent a Mr. March with ships and soldiers to restore him, and when these failed, in December 1711, they sent three other ships with Captain Gordon and a hundred and ten men. John Calvert, the fifth in the Council, went as general with the second expedition. He was to receive Rs. 10,000 if he succeeded and the English were promised the sole trade of the islands. But Calvert died, and the second expedition failed like the first. In spite of the secrecy with which these expeditions were conducted, accounts were brought home to the Court of Directors by some of the ships' captains, and the matter became a serious ground of complaint against Russell.¹

But although the Court of Directors were in no case pleased with Russell's few efforts after a spirited foreign policy, it was his internal administration of the Company's affairs in Bengal which met with their strongest condemnation. They complained bitterly that he mismanaged the Company's shipping, that he took no trouble to provide freight voyages for the Company's vessels which were detained in India, that the goods purchased for the annual investment were badly selected and badly packed, that he left everything to his Indian broker, who was a villain, and that he allowed expenses to grow prodigiously while the revenues of the settlement remained stationary.²

A good deal could be said in defence of Russell under each and all of these heads. Thus as regards the revenues of Calcutta, it may be pointed out that though Russell did not see his way to take the particular steps recommended by the Court of Directors, yet he brought about a most substantial improvement by placing the management of the office of the Collector of Calcutta in the hands of Henry Moore,³ whose long years of faithful service justified the wisdom of the choice. An immediate effect was perceived in the increase of the town revenues which rose at once from Rs. 1,500 to about Rs. 2,500 a month.⁴ Yet the Court perversely ascribed this improvement to Weltden,⁵ and gave no credit for it to Russell or Henry Moore. As regards the much abused Indian broker, it may be pointed out that the subsequent experience showed that the accusations of the Court were unfounded, and that no better man could be found for the post.

On the other hand if there was some slackness in Russell's general management of the Company's affairs, this can hardly be wondered at when we remember the unbroken length of his service in India and his flagging energies. To this undoubtedly must be ascribed the fact that John Russell did very little for the health or safety of Calcutta. Something he did to suppress the burglaries which had of late become common in Calcutta by ordering the guards to patrol the streets at night and by making the felons so caught work in chains at the fortifications.¹ The Consultations Book also tells us that he rebuilt the house in the Company's gardens,² and the naval store places in the banksall yard.³ He made an enclosure for provisions for the general table,⁴ and purchased a large house and gardens⁵ for the Company which was to be used for the reception of distinguished visitors but which afterwards, it would seem, became the residence of the governor. In the fort he completed a range of buildings begun by Weltden which served both for warehouses and for a curtain between the two river side bastions.⁶ A letter from Bengal dated the 10th December, 1712, mentions a number of other small improvements.⁷ According to it the works at Fort William are in great forwardness, but not perfectly completed. The wharf is finished but not the breastwork on it. The strong landing stage, and the crane at the end of it, which will work at all times of the tide, are nearly done. Within the fort all that remains is a little work on one of the curtains, with the construction of a broad walk round the walls, and the reconstruction of the central range of lodgings running from the east to the west curtain which are now decayed and ready to fall.⁸ In short, Russell did little more than finish what his predecessors began, and made no effort to enclose the factory with a properly constructed moat and earthworks.

The Court of Directors frequently suggested large schemes for the improvement of the settlement, such as the digging of a great ditch all around the town, the building of a new dock and a large warehouse for general use.⁹ But Russell had no mind for such schemes. Thus Calcutta was left for the next fifty years with a fort which was really no fort, which made "a very pompous show to the water side by high turrets of lofty buildings," but had "no real strength or power of defence."¹

For three years the Court of Directors remonstrated with Russell, and complained of his mismanagement. At last, in January, 1714, they wrote to Bengal to say that they had dismissed him from his office of President and had appointed Robert Hedges to succeed him. As it happened these orders were unnecessary. During the whole of his government, Russell had been in failing health, and during the last two years 1712, 1713, he had been frequently absent from Calcutta, which probably accounts for the opportunist dealings of his government with the country powers. In March, 1712, he went down the river on the Mary Buoyer in the hope of recovering strength,² but the benefit if any could only have been temporary, for at the beginning of 1713, it is recorded that Russell had then been for several months very much indisposed and that the doctors declared that his only chance of recovery was to go up the river.³ Russell accordingly made over the charge of his duties to Robert Hedges and went up to Nadia accompanied by Richard Harvey, the surgeon of the Recovery, and by Captain Woodville with a guard of fifty soldiers.⁴ In February Russell returned⁵ and was apparently so satisfied with the treatment that he had Harvey appointed doctor to the settlement to replace James who had gone to England.⁶ But in a few days he had a relapse, and was again ordered away out of the bad air of Calcutta.⁷ On the 14th April, his wife, Rebecca, to whom he had been married for more than fifteen years, died at Chandannagar, and was the next day buried in Calcutta.⁸ Russell it would seem was too unwell to attend the funeral for he did not himself return from Chandannagar till the 29th May.⁹ Left thus a widower with three children to care for and educate, Russell struggled on in great mental and bodily affliction through the steamy months of the hot season of Lower Bengal till, at the end of the year, the departure of the Company's shipping brought him his release. In the autumn he seems to have spent a good deal of time on the river going about from ship to ship. In the log of the Cardigan, we catch glimpses of him as he passes by under a salute of twenty-one guns to dine on the Somers or sup on the Marlborough, on which he was to take his passage home.¹ At length on Thursday the 3rd December, 1713, "having already committed the Company's cash and all under his charge to the care of Robert Hedges Esq^r. and not being charged with any debt in the Company's books," he resigned "his station leaving Mr. Hedges to succeed President possessed of that station agreeable to the Company's orders."² As the Cardigan lay at anchor opposite the Fort, her captain, who seems to have been ready to burn powder on every possible occasion, manned the yards of his ship, and fired twenty-one guns when Russell delivered up his commission and twenty-one more when he went into his boat.³ On Wednesday, the 9th, the Marlborough sailed from the Sandheads⁴ and Russell saw the last of the flat shores of Bengal. On the 22nd the ship reached Madras where they stayed a month. Early in April they touched at the Cape and Governor Russell went ashore and returned after a week's stay each time under a salute of eleven guns. In August, 1714, Russell with his three children reached England.⁵

A year later on the 7th September, 1715, John Russell of Duke Street, St James, Westminster, married Joanna, sole daughter and heiress of John Thurban of Chequers Court and Alsborough, Buckinghamshire.⁶ Though only forty-five years old, the climate of India had left no strength for active work, and so after a life of twenty years spent in retirement, he died at Bath on the 5th December, 1735.⁷

By his second wife John Russell had only one child, Anne, who died an infant. Of his children by his first wife, Mary and Elizabeth, the two younger girls returned to India in 1728, when they were married, Mary to Josiah Holmes, and Elizabeth to Samuel Greenhill. The eldest daughter Frances remained in England and became bed-chamber woman to the Princess Amelia. Of her the following anecdote is told. Once on the 30th January when she was adjusting the Princess' dress, the Prince of Wales, coming into the room, foolishly said, "Ah, Miss Russell, are you not at Church to endeavour to avert the judgment of Heaven from falling upon the nation for the sins of your ancestor Oliver?" To which she replied with spirit, "Is it not humiliation

CHAPTER VI.

THE ADMINISTRATION OF ROBERT HEDGES.

ROBERT HEDGES¹ was an older and in some ways a more experienced man than John Russell, whom he succeeded. He was the nephew of Sir William Hedges, first governor in the Bay of Bengal, and was probably born in Ireland about the year 1660, being the son of Sir William's only brother, Robert Hedges, of Burras in Queen's county. He was appointed factor in the Company's service on the 5th October 1681; and in the next year came to Bengal with his uncle, who placed him at Malda, and in a short time put him in charge of the mint business at Rajmahal. At the end of the year 1684, when his uncle left Bengal and embarked for Persia, his nephew Robert went with him, and accompanied him in his long overland journey to Scanderoon whence they sailed in a French "Provincial" ship to Marseilles, and, travelling across France, reached England in April, 1687. This hasty leaving of his post in Bengal was resented by the Old Company as a desertion of duty, and when Robert Hedges returned to India, in 1669, he was in the service of the New or English Company, first as chief of the factory at Masulipatan, and afterwards as second of the council in Bengal. In this capacity he had to undertake the unpleasant duties of winding up the affairs of the New Company, and calling Sir Edward Littleton to account for his mismanagement of them.² In 1704, he became one of the two Chairmen who presided in rotation over the United Trade Council,³ but was forced to give up his place at the end of 1705, on becoming titular president of the Council of the New Company. He seems to have taken his fair share in the disputes and quarrels of the 'Rotation Government,' and returned home, early in 1707, dissatisfied with the management of affairs in Calcutta,¹ and determined to urge his views upon the Court. His representations were not without their effect. As we have seen, in 1709 the Directors abolished the 'Rotation Government' and appointed Anthony Weltden, a stranger and outsider, president of the council and governor of Fort William, while Hedges was appointed second of the council and chief at Cassimbazar.² On the deposition of Anthony Weltden, the tide of the Company's good opinion having now turned in favour of thier old servants, Hedges was superseded by John Russell.³ So from March 1711 to June 1712 Hedges remained at Cassimbazar carrying on long and tedious negotiations with the astute Murshid Quli Khān in the interests of the Company's trade.⁴ On becoming president, eighteen months later,⁵ negotiations with the Indian Government were resumed.

The year 1714 opened auspiciously. On the 4th January an order arrived from the Court at Delhi forbidding Murshid Quli Khān to interfere with the English trade, which was to pass with the same freedom and privilege as in former days. It was in consequence thought politic to make great public rejoicings in Calcutta. The troops of the garrison fired a feu de joye and the Company's servants drank the health of Queen Anne and of King Farrukhsiyar with fifty-one guns to each health. "After which we drank prosperity to the Hon^{ble} Company with thirty-one guns and success to their Trade with twenty-one guns more and all the ships in the Road fired at every health, after this at night we order'd a Large Bonfire to be made and gave our Soldiers a tub of Punch to Chear their harts, we also ordered our Merchants to write to their correspondents everywhere of this Husbull Hookum and how greatly we Honour and Esteem the Kings Gracious favour and what Rejoycings we made at it."⁶ Encouraged by the favour thus shown them by the new king the Council at Calcutta at last made up their minds to send the long deferred embassy with their present to the Moguls' Court.⁷

In April, 1714, after three months' of further discussions and final arrangements¹ the boats with the present started for Patna,² whence a year later the whole embassy proceeded by road to Delhi.³ The adventures of the English negotiators, their anxieties, their quarrels, their mistakes, their final success form an interesting episode in the history of British India which will be related elsewhere. For Hedges and his Council in Calcutta nothing was left but to record the accounts sent from Delhi from time to time, and to await in patience the end, which did not come till 1717. Their immediate concern was with the governments at Hugli and Murshidabad.

The relations of Hedges with the authorities at Hugli were sufficiently friendly, thanks to a judicious mixture of force and bribery. During the last months of Russell's government the Hugli officials by their vexatious proceedings had constrained the English to have recourse to strong measures. In September, 1713, Hedges and Williamson with sixty soldiers were sent up to Hugli to protest against the stoppage of their business and to threaten reprisals.⁴ At the same time they took advantage of the opportunity to seize certain runaway sailors from the King William and the Cardigan, and send them back to Calcutta for punishment.⁵ Their determined attitude had the usual result. The officials removed all the stoppages,⁶ and for some time to come the most amicable relations prevailed. The English every now and then gratified the officials with presents⁷ and were ready to hand over to them anyone who might seek to escape the long arm of the Nabob Murshid Quli by hiding in Calcutta.⁸

Late in the afternoon of Thursday the 28th April 1715, a packet was received in Calcutta from the Directors with the news "of the death of our late gracious sovereign Queen Anne of blessed memory, who died in August last, and of the Elector of Hanover's happy accession to the crown of Great Britain who arrived England in safety in September following." That same evening, fifty guns were fired for the death of the Queen, and the next day the most high and mighty prince George, Elector of Brunswick Lunenburg, was proclaimed at Calcutta, King of Great Britain, France, and Ireland, defender of the faith, with due solemnity suitable to the great occasion.¹

About this time Hedges determined to once again come to close quarters with the Nabob Murshid Quli, Ja'far Khān, and resettle the factory at Cassimbazar. He would have done so, it appears, a year sooner, on receipt of the royal order for free trade, but was prevented for want of money. This year the way seemed clear. There was money enough in the Company's cash; a new broker had been appointed at Calcutta, whom Hedges fondly expected to put an end to all local abuses, and the embassy was on its way to Delhi to procure an imperial rescript in favour of the English.²

The position was briefly this. Hedges wanted that the Company's trade at Cassimbazar should pass free of all restrictions and duties, and that he should have a free use of the mint on certain days in the week. Murshid Quli altogether refused the free use of the mint, as contrary to the sovereignty of the Mogul, and from time to time stopped or threatened to stop the English trade on the ground that the Company's servants abused the right of issuing passes. From home the Directors urged that strict measures should be taken to see that the passes were not abused and that no handle for oppression should be given to the Nabob; but at the same time they reiterated their belief that the Nabob was merely corrupt and avaricious. He wanted to be secretly bribed, but no considerable sum was to be given him as he was sure to yield if the English representatives were sufficiently peremptory.³

At the beginning of May, 1715, the Council at Calcutta recorded a long protest on the subject in the newsbook at Hugli in the following terms.⁴ "Messrs. Browne and Spencer who are Members in the Government of Calcutta whom the Governour Mr. Hedges hath sent hither They on the Day of Adaulutt (or justice) declared that by the Order of his Imperiall Majestie whatever they bought or sold was exempted from Custome that the Nabob conformable to that order had given his Perwanna for our free trade since which the Droga of the Custome house att Muxsoosavad took from their Factors (who had bought Silk and Sugar on their Account) Custome by force upon this they writ a Letter of request to the Nabob but his Officers throwing Obstacles in the way their Vackeil had not an opportunity to present itt for which reason all their Factors refuse to receive Impress money for goods for their expected Ships whose arrivall approaches that they were in hope this affaire being entered in the news Book, a Request will be made to the Nabob to exempt us (according to ancient usage) from Custome and that an Order will be issued forth for the restoring what hath been taken from their Factors by force.

“Upon this the Wackanagur entered in the news Book according to Information given, that if for the future the Droga of the Cuttchurray did not refraine from exacting Custome from the English (conformable to the Imperiall order, and the Duans Perwanna) and restore what he hath hitherto violently exacted by obstructing the English affaires, great numbers of Merchants will suffer for in stopping the English trade, all the Bengal trade is stopt.”

On the 23rd May the Council resolved on resettling the Cassimbazar factory which seemed to them necessary for the following considerations.¹ “If the full quantity of Silk We are Ordered to provide could be bought here that woud not be a valid argument against settling Cossimbuzar Factory, for very good Silk is seldom to be mett with here the refuse rejected att Cossimbuzar being mostly what is brought hither for Sale.

“If Cossimbuzar Factory had been settled last year (which our being in debt and want of money prevented) the Farmer of the Customs woud scarce have presumed to use our Merchants Gomastahs ill on a forged pretence that part of the goods provided by them and sent us on our Dustucks was for their own not our account. The Presence and good Conduct of an Experienced Chief might easily have prevented or found a remedy for such Pretences.

“The Duans Sunnod conforming with the Kings command in his Husbullhookum putts us on better terms with the Government then We have been for many past years, or than any other Nation Yett is; but if We do not settle Cossimbuzar Factory We may almost be said to give up the advantage We have been long struggling for.

“For which reasons itt is Unianimously Agreed that We send a Cheif and Councill to Cossimbuzar.

“Mr. Addams Second in Councill whose right itt is to be Cheif at Cossimbuzar being proposed Declares He is fully resolved to return for England by one of the next Ships dispatched hence And requests that Mr. Samuel Feake, now third in Council here (to whom he gives up his right to that Station), may in his stead be appointed Cheif of Cossimbuzar, which Mr. Feake accepting of itt is Unianimously Agreed that Mr. Samuel Feake be appointed Cheif of Cossimbuzar Factory."

"Mr. Waterworth Collett who after Mr. Addams his Departure will succeed to be of Council here, desiring on that account another may instead of him be sent second to Cossimbuzar Mr. Edward Crisp is Unianimously chosen to be Second there itt also agreed that Mr. Edward Ange now att Cossimbuzar Who by his standing will commence Factor in July next be continued Third in Council at that Factory."

In July the English agents arrived at Cassimbazar,¹ and on the 9th August, Feake visited the Nabob,² who received him civilly enough and told him that he might coin sicca rupees, and that he would enquire into the alleged grievances. At the same time he refused to take any presents and complained that the English coloured other people's good by their abuse of their passes. These polite words did not mean that the Nabob would in any way abandon his position. On the contrary, during the months of August and September, the English experienced so many hinderances that they sent an attorney to Murshidabad to protest and threaten;³ but in November a modus vivendi seems to have been found, for Feake writes to say⁴ that he "hopes for the free use of the Mint, and that the Nabob has given orders for our business to go on without Molestation that the Peons he had put upon our Merchants were taken off. These proceedings had so good effect with our Merchants that severall had brought Silk into the Factory and more daily was coming in. They [i.e., the English at Cassimbuzar] desire we woud send them some treasure and the Pucka lead that is the silver lead and two of our young men to be assisting in their business; They also desire to have liberty that a house may be bought or built near the Mint without which they cannot go on with their business in the Mint." The Council accordingly agreed "That Boates be got ready and two Chests of French Crowns Nine Chests of Syon Dollars, three Chests of German Dollars, That Charles Hampton and Phillip Michell get ready to go up with the said Treasure to Cossimbuzar, that we write to Mr. Feake etc. to hire a House if possible near the Mint for this Season, so that in case our business should not go on, We may nott have a House lye on our hands."

In February, 1716, we find that the Nabob was not prepared, after all, to grant the free use of the Mint, but "had started from his Bargain and could not give them so firm a Sunnud as he first Offered Alledging that it is not in his power to Specifie the free use of the Mint, nor he dare not unless they could Produce the Kings order." The Nabob promised "to give them a Verball order for the use of the Mint till his Majestys Phirmaund came to Confirm the same, and in case the Phirmaund did not order it, he gave them to understand they must then pay custom for the use of the Mint."¹

In April, 1716, Feake wrote to the Council and practically proposed to concede the Nabob's demands. Ja'far Khān was to be given Rs. 15,000, his treasurer 5,000, and Rs. 5000 more was to be given to the under-officers.² "For this Sum or a small matter under or over they hope to Adjust matters with the Government, and have a Sunnud to Carry on their business in Bengall unmolested, and a Verbal order for the use of the Mint."

"This Letter we takeing into serious Consideration," says the Council, "and Considering the interest Jaffer Caun has at Court, which by the answers given to our Generall Petition, wee find Severall important articles are referred to his determination, and his Council to be asked to other articles, wee are of a Unanimous Opinion that since Jaffer Cawn and wee are at present in Enmity it will be of great benefitt to our Negotiation at the Mogulls Court as well as haveing our Merchants go on with the Companys affairs unmoslested to make him our Friend and Accomodate matters with him and his officers at Muxoodavad. Ordered therefore that a Letter be instantly wrote to Mr. Feake etc. at Cassimbazar giving them leave to make up the business with the Nabob and his Officers as Cheap and as Speedily as they Conveniently can, but that they must not far Exceed the Sum of 25,000 Siccaes mentioned in their Letter."

The letter may have been written "instantly," but the Council were a good while paying the money, for, on the 10th December 1716 we find that Ja'far Khān is still asking for payment and harassing the English trade. "Our Boats with the Hon^{ble} Companys Goods from

In March, 1717, the English received tidings from Delhi which they regarded as deciding the diplomatic controversy in their favour.² The embassy had proved most successful. The Emperor had conceded all the English requests. The Calcutta Government was to be allowed to take up the neighbouring villages; their trade was to pass free; and they were to have the free use of the Mint. In May the Council learnt that the imperial rescripts were actually in their ambassador's hands and resolved upon great rejoycings.³ On Wednesday the 13th May a public dinner was given to all the Company's servants with a loud noise of cannon, and the day concluded with “bonfires and other demonstrations of joy which we know will be taken notice of in the Waqā and other public newspapers.” But the cannon and the bonfires did not move Ja'far Khān. In July he granted the English his promised order for free trade without any charge, but no permission to use the mint.⁴ In vain the English showed him the copy of the King's royal rescript and the orders about the mint and for the purchase of the towns or neighbouring villages. He positively said that the English should not have the use of the mint nor liberty to purchase more towns though both might have been granted by the king, and he kept his word.¹

The diplomatic proceedings of Hedges and Feake were on the whole satisfactory to their Honourable Masters in England, though they considered that a greater display of firmness would have made it unnecessary to pay the nabob so large a sum as 15000 Rupees.² The Court of Directors also at first approved of various changes introduced by Hedges by way of reform though they afterwards modified their view and declared that "in the last stage of his life he seemed to flag."³ These disputed points will be reserved for another chapter, the remainder of the present chapter being devoted to non-contentious matters.

The English were at this time on good terms with their European neighbours, and in December 1714 we find them attempting unsuccessfully to mediate between the Danes and the "Moors."⁴ In 1715, however, a curious incident happened in connection with the Portuguese. In 1713, the Jesus Maria Joseph,⁵ captured during the war by Monseieur Boynot, had been condemned as lawful prize at Manilla and sold to Alexo Pessoa and Mamel Ramos. On returning in her to Madras, to which place she originally belonged, one of her former owners Alexo Pereira brought an action against Pessoa on the ground that he had been appointed attorney to redeem the ship for the original owners and not to buy her for himself. The Court at Macao, however, decided in favour of Pessoa, and so did the Court at Madras where the case was again heard. Before the second decision was given, a Portuguese frigate the Anna and Joseph arrived at Fort St. George, and it was said that she had been sent by the Viceroy of Goa to seize the Jesus Maria Joseph and carry her to Goa for a fresh trial. But the Commander, Francisco de Aruja, had given Pessoa, now the sole owner of the ship, a certificate signed by himself and Pereira that the report was frivolous, and on the strength of this declaration, and the decisions of three different courts, the ship had been bought by Governor Harrison and other Englishmen at Madras, and renamed the Colloway Chitty. It might have been supposed that the matter was now settled. Yet in October, 1715, while the ship was lying below Calcutta in the Sankral Reach, with the Honourable Company's pass and pilot on board her, Francisco de Aruja sent forty men to seize her and refused to restore her. He professed to be acting under orders from Goa and would not listen to any friendly overtures. Under these circumstances the Council at Calcutta had no alternative but to resort to force.¹ On the 11th October they declared the seizure of the Colloway Chitty to be an act of piracy, and the Heathcote and the Mary were ordered to retake her on their way up the river. The Heathcote had on board of her Captain George Borlase with fifty soldiers. But the Portuguese declared that there were a hundred men on the Colloway Chitty, and were loud and furious in their threats. On Tuesday, the 18th October, the Heathcote came up to her, when the Portuguese strack their colours and surrendered at the first summons. Instead of a hundred men the whole crew amounted to twenty-seven only. The prisoners were put half on board the Heathcote, and half on board the Mary, and were subsequently handed over by the Council to the Portuguese authorities to be tried at Goa for their crime.² And the English heard no more of the matter. From England the Court wrote entirely approving of the judicious line of action adopted by Hedges and his Council.³

To judge from the incident of the Colloway Chitty the Portuguese in Eastern India were still addicted to violence and lawlessness as they had been a century or two earlier. Unfortunately they did not in this respect stand alone. Violence at night in the streets is a feature of Calcutta life for which our knowledge of English manners at the beginning of the eighteenth century might have prepared us, but which nevertheless is not pleasant to read about. In August, 1713, the Consultations book records a disgraceful affray between Jean Suin and William Hall.⁴ At 9 o'clock in the night of Saturday the 25th July William Hall with Ensign John Browne and Thomas Stacey, a doctor's assistant, went to the house where Jean Suin was living with two other foreigners, and demanded admittance. The inmates, no doubt fearing violence, refused to admit callers so late at night, upon which Hall got over the wall of the yard with a drawn sword hidden under his cloak, and let in his companions. Jean Suin ran into the house and brought out his sword, which he held concealed behind his back, till Hall, rushing at him, drove him into a corner of the yard, and forced him to fight in self-defence, while the others looked on. A thrust from Hall's sword wounded Suin in the hand and tore his sword arm from the wrist to the elbow. A counterstroke by Suin, passing obliquely through Hall's right side, and entering the lower part of the belly, resulted four days later in death.¹ No reason for the quarrel is alleged in the Consultations book, and the decision given altogether acquitted Suin as having acted in self-defence.²

Four months later we read of another quarrel of a similar nature. On Saturday, the 5th December, 1713, the Charleton arrived at Calcutta from Madras,³ and her mate Alexander Mackdowle went off on shore to enjoy himself after his fashion. By eight o'clock at night, after drum-beat, he was quite drunk and had got into a quarrel with Captain Gordon, who struck him several times with his cane. Mackdowle however said, "What benefit is it to strike a drunken man? Strike me no more. If I was sober I would fight you, but I am so drunk I cannot fight." This excuse seems to have further incensed Gordon. He pressed home upon Mackdowle, who thereupon half drew his sword but returned it to its scabbard, and was going off, when Gordon seized his coat and tore it and then "shoved him from him with his hand, and ran him with sword into the side, on which Mackdowle fell, and, when down, gave him another wound in the thigh." The wretched man only managed to reach home and die, and that very night Gordon's sword was brought before the Council "bloody full a foot from the point upwards." In this case the prisoner was clearly the aggressor; and on the 21st December the Council "unanimously agreed and ordered that Captain Gordon be sent prisoner to England in the Recovery to be dealt with there as the Honourable Court of Directors shall order."⁴ If the report of the case is true we cannot feel much pity for Gordon himself,⁵ but we cannot help pitying poor Mary Gordon, who had come out on the Cardigan to join her husband,⁶ and had arrived at Calcutta only last August.⁷ After this we hear no more for some time to come of deeds of violence and bloodshed. It may be that the cases were no longer tried by the Council, or, more probably, Robert Hedges took measures to put stop to such quarrels, a good deed for which he never received any credit or thanks.

In the matter of buildings Hedges did not do much. He was quite satisfied with the fort as Russell left it, and confined himself to absolutely necessary repairs¹ such as the rebuilding of the long row, which contained the lodgings of the Company's writers, and divided the fort into two sections.² His principal works were on the river side. In June, 1714, a drain and a bridge were built to protect the bank of the river at Perrins Gardens,³ and in January, 1717, "the small thatched huts standing on the river's edge before the town, being observed not to preserve but prejudice the banks," were ordered to be all pulled down and removed before the rains set in, and the Collector of Calcutta was directed to see "all as far up as Pranns house a little short of Captain Seaton's compound formerly called the Fakir's ground pulled down and removed."⁴ Besides this Hedges constructed a dock large enough to hold two ships of four hundred tons, with store-houses adjoining it⁵ and purchased an octagon building on the point of land near Sutanuti to control the trade of the river.⁶ The dock, we are afterwards told, proved useless, and the octagon, a nuisance.

As regards the outward observances of religion the condition of Calcutta during the rule of Governor Hedges seems to have been fairly satisfactory. The Company's charter enjoined that a chaplain should be maintained in every garrison and superior factory, and that all ministers sent to reside in India should be obliged to learn Portuguese, and apply themselves to learn the native language of the country where they resided, "the better to instruct the Gentiles that shall servants or slaves of the Company and of their agents in the Protestant religion." In case of the death of any minister his place was to be supplied by one of the chaplains of the next ship arriving at or near his station; and besides a minister the Company was also directed to supply school masters in all their garrisons and superior factories when found necessary.⁷

The Court of Directors does not seem to have found it necessary to supply Calcutta with a school master till many years after this, and they even left the place without a chaplain for considerable intervals. In August, 1711, William Anderson fell desperately ill and died,⁸ and for the next two years the settlement had to content itself with the ministrations of Mr James Williamson, a member of the Council, who put on a customary suit of black, and read prayers and a sermon every Sunday.¹ It was not till the 12th August, 1713, that Samuel Briercliffe arrived in Calcutta as the Company's chaplain.² He was then twenty-seven years of age having been educated at Westminster School and at Trinity College, Cambridge, whence he graduated bachelor of arts in 1708. He was ordained Deacon by the Bishop of London on Tuesday the 19th July, 1709, and Priest on Sunday the 24th September, 1710, and was elected, chaplain in 1712, after assisting Dr. Thomas Fuller, the rector of Hatfield, for two years as curate.

He appears to have been well received by his flock in Calcutta, and in the matter of church buildings he was well off. The church of St Anne was in good repair. The bell which arrived in 1712 had been hung in a convenient handsome place over the church porch,³ and in 1713 the Council added a large clock.⁴ In this respect Calcutta compared favourably with Bombay where the church was still building towards which, as appears from correspondence between Briercliffe and his brother chaplain Richard Cobbe in 1716, Calcutta contributed some eight hundred rupees, Hedges himself giving five hundred.⁵ Briercliffe, therefore, finding nothing to do in the way of the building or restoring of churches, turned his superfluous energies in other directions, and strove to promote the projects of the Society for promoting Christian Knowledge, and especially the establishment of a charity school in Calcutta. On this subject he wrote to the Society on the 25th November, 1713, and on the 2nd September, 1714, he was elected a corresponding member, and at the end of the year a parcel of books was sent to him, the nucleus of a vestry library. In a second letter to the Society on the 31st December, 1715, Briercliffe had to admit that his efforts after a charity school had come to nothing. In Calcutta he said "we are not one two thousand, we have few Protestants in this place besides those of our own nation." Elsewhere he remarks that "a man cannot lodge and board here tolerably well under forty rupees a month, that is £5,"⁶ from which we may infer that his salary of a hundred pounds a year, with forty rupees a month for diet, must have amply sufficed for his bachelor wants. Yet, if we are to believe the Court of Directors, he tried to increase his income by engaging in private trade, or, as they phrased it, he understood and practised other matters besides those that directly or in consequence respected his function, which though they might be thought excusable in others were not so well in him, and wherein the following of his example was not praiseworthy in any.¹ He took pains to master Portuguese and perhaps would have learnt Persian,² but on the 14th August, 1717, his labours both religious and secular were cut short by death,³ and Calcutta was once more left without a pastor. For the next two years Mr. Richard Harvey, the Doctor, "officiated in the church service."⁴

DIFFICULT POINTS.

THERE were certain difficult questions connected with the management of the English affairs in Bengal, questions which Russell tried to avoid, but which Hedges tried to settle, which remain for discussion in this last chapter.

Among these we may give the first place to the much vexed question of the currency. The difficulties here arose from the fact that the coins struck at the different Indian mints, or coins of different years struck at the same mint, were not reckoned to be of the same value. According to the trade usage of each different market they were liable to different rates of discount, and in order to make exchanges possible the values of actual rupees of every kind were expressible in terms of an ideal rupee known as the current or nominal rupee.¹ Thus in Bengal at the beginning of the eighteenth century the sicca rupee was reckoned as 12½ per cent. better than the current rupee, that is to say, 100 sicca rupees were equivalent to 112½ current rupees.²

At Madras, where the Company had a mint of its own, the variations in the value of the rupee did not cause so much trouble. Eighty-nine and a half ounces of dollar silver were there always convertible into a little more than 218 rupees, allowing two per cent. for the cost of coining.³ And these Madras rupees were accepted without difficulty, not only in Madras and Southern India, but also in Calcutta and Bengal as long as the Mogul Court was in the south. But in 1709 when that Court was transferred to North India, the Government treasury being no longer able to use Madras rupees in remittances to the South, refused to accept them and their value fell. A hundred Madras rupees were now reckoned as worth 107 current rupees instead of 109.¹ For this loss on the Madras rupees two remedies offered themselves to the English in Calcutta. They might sell the Company's bullion in which case 89½ ounces of dollar silver would ordinarily return 209 sicca, or 235 current rupees; or better still they might get it coined at a local mint, where the same amount of bullion produced 212 sicca or 238½ current rupees. Either of these courses was more advantageous than converting the 89½ ounces into 218 Madras rupees which at a premium of 7 per cent. were equivalent to no more than 233¼ current rupees.²

² Bengal General Letter, 13 Jan. 1717, para. 36. In 1660 this premium was only 1½ per cent. See Early Annals, Vol. I. p. 391.

So the Rotation Government wrote home and asked that bullion might be sent direct to Bengal to be converted there into sicca rupees.³ But the Court of Directors were, after their kind, dissatisfied with the proposals of the local authorities. They refused to recognise the working of economic laws, and declared that the depreciation of the Madras rupee was the work of treachery.⁴ They could not see why their bullion should sell at so low a price as 209 sicca rupees for 89½ ounces, and argued that this quantity if sent to the mint ought to produce 219 or 220 sicca rupees.⁵ A wordy war followed, and intricate calculations were brought forward on both sides. In the end matters were left thus. While in Calcutta the value of the Madras rupee was forced up so that the merchants took them at a premium of ten per cent., everywhere else they would pass at not more than the value of current rupees. Thus the Court of Directors was after all driven to admit that it was better to buy sicca rupees or get bullion coined locally. For this reason they desired most of all to be allowed to establish a mint at Fort William;⁶ and, when the Mogul refused to grant such an infringement of his sovereign rights, they asked and obtained the privilege of using his mints custom free for three days in the week, a privilege which proved of little use, for, as we have seen, the local Government refused to recognise it.⁷ The Calcutta Council moreover was not at all sure of the benefit of the concessions. They argued that as their investment was contracted in current rupees, the depreciation of current rupees, and therefore the appreciation of sicca rupees, was an advantage. Now the appreciation of the sicca rupees would be stopped if the Company caused them to be coined in large quantities. But the Court of Directors could not or would not understand these arguments.¹ To the last they maintained that their good honest rupees ought to pass current for their full value in Bengal, and that if they did not treachery must be at the bottom of it.

Another question which presented itself for solution, first to Russell, and then to Hedges, was the business of letting out ships on freight voyages. For the right understanding of this matter it must be remembered that the Company, having refused to properly pay its servants, allowed them to "improve their fortunes" by private trade. They could not of course engage in the commerce with Europe except in certain articles such as precious stones; that would have been infringing the Company's monopoly. But they might traffic in local wares and hire out ships for local voyages in India and in Indian waters. Thus the Company took up large ships of three hundred or four hundred tons burden and sent them to India at the beginning of every year laden with cloth, hardware and bullion. The ships, arriving at the Bay about July or August, discharged their cargoes into the Calcutta warehouses, and, taking on board instead the year's investment in piece goods, silk and saltpetre, sailed for home at the beginning of the next year. This was the recognised business of the East India Company; but the trade along the coast was the perquisite of the Company's servants, who were part or sole owners of a number of smaller ships of a hundred tons or so which traded from the Bay to Surat and Persia. But although it was desirable that the Company's shipping of any one year should return in the following year, it was not always possible. For various reasons a ship might be detained a whole year or more in the Bay of Bengal, and it became necessary to find out some profitable employment for her to set against the charge of demurrage. In such case the Directors claimed a share in the benefit of the freight voyages and so interfered with the coasting trade upon which the lives and fortunes of the Company's servants so greatly depended.² At first the experiment was tried of letting out the whole of a ship to a single merchant, or body of merchants, and contracting for payment on the ship's return. But in 1710, when the Directors heard from Sir George Matthew how much more profitable it was to carry goods for every one that offered, paying ready money, whether the quantity were great or small, they ordered their servants in Calcutta to adopt this plan, and were even indignant that they had not already done so.¹ And that they might ensure obedience the Directors further ordered that when any proposals were made for letting one of their ships to freight the captain should be called into the council, to hear, vote upon, and report the proceedings.

² General Letter from the Court to Bengal, 9 Jan. 1719, para. 8.

Now, whatever the company might order, it was clear that, when its large ships were thus let out to freight, the quantity of tonnage engaged in the coasting trade was suddenly and largely increased, and that the rates must be reduced. Hence at Calcutta men were slow to employ the ships from Europe on freight voyages, and at last when they did, the proceeds were disappointing.

The letters from the Court to Bengal are full of complaints about Russell's action in this matter. Thus, in 1711, he promised to employ the Derby on a freight voyage, but in the end sent her to Madras with a few bales of goods and stores.² Again, in 1712, he made a show of employing the London, but took no trouble to see that she got her freight. At the beginning of September, the broker was ordered to give public notice at Hugli that the London was to proceed on a voyage to Surat in November, and would be up at Fort William to receive any bales that should offer. But the London was not actually ordered up till the beginning of October, and not dispatched till the 15th December.³ "In our letter from Bombay," write the Directors, "we are advised she did arrive there without any freight, though Captain Upton affirmed several days before he had his despatches there were upwards of eight hundred bales and from other hands we have an account of several hundred ready for Surat which the General and Council believed were detained for your own private ships. We have private information that the ship Shaw Allum belonging to some of you was what you had an eye to, and by a little longer stay more bales would present, and therefore you would rather put the Recovery on the voyage she is upon to Persia than send her on the freight. But, when the twelve hundred bales you expected sank to a lesser quantity, one of you could not forbear venting himself with oaths that if he could have foreseen it the Shaw Allum should have had the voyage the Recovery had. What can be said in excuse for this sort of management and especially when you had our thoughts concerning freight voyages express and plain before you?"⁴

The Directors were much better pleased with Hedges,¹ who under pressure of reiterated orders secured good freight voyages for several of their ships such as the Hanover, Cadigan and Arabella;² but he did so by arbitrarily limiting the amount of shipping to be employed locally. In 1719, just before his death he proposed to legalise this system by passing rules to the following effect. Every year, before any ship was set up for Surat and Persia, and as often after as might be necessary, the company's servants concerned in such ships were to meet together and ascertain what ships would be required for the quantity of freight goods which were likely to offer for these ports. The number of ships for Surat and Persia having been thus determined, no more were to be set up that year except by the general consent of the shipping junto, and ships from other ports consigned to Calcutta, coming afterwards and expecting freight, were to be content with the gleanings left. The company's ships were to be always filled first, and in every private ship a third share was to be reserved for the "gentlemen of Madras," and a fourth share for those of Bombay. Ships were not to lade at any point on the river between Hugli and Calcutta out of the Company's bounds, nor without the knowledge of the Governor, nor without showing passes for the goods to the warehouse-keeper.³ The reason of these rules as Hedges professed, was that the rate of freight might not be beaten down by underhand practices as it must of necessity be if separate interests were set up. The measure was opposed by the majority of the Calcutta Council who declared that the governor was trying to engross the freight for himself and his friends, and was disallowed by the Court. The good genius of the company prevailed at the expense of logic.⁴ The Directors wished to share in the benefits of freight voyages, and they wished the benefits to be as great as ever; but they would not allow Hedges "to break in upon the liberty allowed over servants in a fair way to improve their fortunes." In other words they asked that the cake should be divided into ten and they asked that their portions should be as big as when it was divided into five.

The expediency of maintaining subordinate establishments at the principal markets in Bengal, was a subject of frequent debate between the Court of Directors and the Calcutta Council. At the beginning of this period, the Company had factories only at Balasor and Patna. During the period they withdrew their factory at Patna; and settled, withdrew, and again settled a factory at Cossimbazar. In the end, they seem to have become convinced that on the whole subordinate factories were advantageous. But there were many doubts. While the Calcutta Council was in favour of extending their out-agencies, the Directors at home believed them to be moved rather by considerations of their own advantage than that of the company. True, it was that an Indian agent was not always to be trusted and was always more exposed to official extortion. But a factory was more expensive to keep up, and English merchants upon occasions had been forced to pay large sums to avaricious governors.

A single instance will suffice to illustrate these difficulties. For many years, the company complained that their factory at Patna was a costly establishment which yielded no adequate returns. It might have been supposed that Englishmen would be unwilling to leave Calcutta with its English society and commercial opportunities, and go far away to live in the midst of an Indian town under the immediate control of the Indian rulers. Yet, according to the Court of Directors, Patna was the most desirable station in Bengal, the place where the Calcutta Council sent their prime favourites, because there at a safe distance from all observation and control, they could study their own interest and neglect their masters.¹ At any rate there does not seem to have been any great eagerness to go there. After Lloyd left, in 1710, the post of chief at Patna seems to have gone begging till Edward Pattle, one of the oldest servants of the Company, offered, to take it.² During the whole of Russell's government he remained head of the Patna factory, a difficult and dangerous post; and I believe he honestly tried to do his duty. Yet the Court of Directors, basing their complaints chiefly on the transactions of previous years, condemned his management and at last ordered him to be recalled.

Pattle left Calcutta in February, 1711,³ taking with him Browne as second. Crisp and Pratt were sent up at the same time "to learn the country language and to qualify themselves for the Company's service."⁴ The special feature of the trade at Patna was the collecting and refining of saltpetre of which large quantities were required by the English during the war with France. The piece-goods and saltpetre had to be sent down to Calcutta every year about the beginning of October in a small fleet of river-boats and the safety of the convoy was a matter of much anxiety.¹ A sudden storm might drive the boats ashore and sink them with their rich freight,² or the bands of lawless men that wandered about the land might seize them for plunder,³ or, a still more common occurrence, the local authorities might stop the fleet and demand tribute for letting it pass.⁴ In the year 1712 during the revolutions which took place in the Mogul government, the English merchants at Patna went in daily fear of being seized and plundered, and were in the end glad to escape with the payment of twenty two thousand rupees to the Prince and six thousand five hundred rupees in presents to the Nabob and his officers.⁵ It was the complaint of the Company that these charges were all borne by them, while their servants, who used the establishment in Patna, and the yearly flotilla of boats, to carry on a lucrative trade in opium and other local produce, paid nothing.

At the beginning of the year 1713, before the news of these last misfortunes reached England, the Court of Directors resolved on abolishing the factory. In their letter of the 2nd of February they declared that as their just complaints were not attended to, they were compelled to take this extreme step. Now that the French war was at an end there was no pressing demand for salt-petre, and the Patna investment might be made through native contractors. "We are sure," said they, "if you manage it honestly and discretely our Patna goods will cost us by this way much cheaper than they have been charged to us of late years. We caution you that this our order may not be turned to our disadvantage by pretending that goods are so dear at Hugli that it would be more advantageous to return to Patna, for we shall suspect, and have given you hints to show you it is more than bare suspicion, that, you want it for your own and your creature's private interest. We give you this further reason why we recall Patna. The government have got into our pockets."⁶ Two years later the Directors went further and asked why Russell's government had not of itself abolished the factory without awaiting for orders, when it was found to be expensive. "We should be glad to hear a good reason why it was not done sooner, since you own nothing less would serve to retrench the charges there. Were none among you true enough to our interest to have made this proposal in Council and if it had been rejected by the majority for the sake of their private interest why had not the rest entered the reasons for their proposal that we might have judged of their validity?"¹

So on the 23rd July 1713, Russell passed orders that Pattle was to withdraw speedily, but it took more than a year to wind up matters during which the establishment was strictly limited.² In November, 1714, Pattle made a final but unsuccessful attempt to recover some of the bad debts of the Company and of his predecessor Lloyd.³ In January, 1715, he left Patna with Barker.⁴ On the 1st March he died in Calcutta.⁵

The result of the withdrawal did not justify the Directors. Experience showed that without a proper establishment it was impossible to procure the supplies of saltpetre and the piece-goods which the Company required from Patna and in July, 1718, the factory there was resettled.⁶

There was, however, one part of their policy to which the Directors resolutely adhered. Under the Rotation Government the English free merchant had been practically driven out of Bengal. Upon the pretext of avoiding the political complications which might arise from the acts of irresponsible persons, English free merchants were not allowed to go into the interior and were forced to make all their purchases at Calcutta at prices fixed by the Council and its agents. Traders from Madras complained that they had to pay the Governor of Fort William a commission of ten per cent. on all freight from the Bay, and that it was consequently impossible for them to compete with the Armenian and Mussulman merchants. In 1713, the Court of Directors resolved to reinstate the free merchant and peremptorily ordered that those at Madras should forthwith set about it and be given leave to trade in Bengal.⁷ These orders were repeated two years later, and the Calcutta Council was forced to obey.⁸ Thenceforward the number of free merchants at Calcutta increased and multiplied.

Further complaints were brought against Russell in connection with the year investment which at this time was valued at about £200,000.¹ The Court repeatedly wrote to say that the bales sent home were badly packed,² that the saltpetre was coarse,³ and that the piece goods were too dear.⁴ The President had received orders to study the price lists for the years before 1699, when the competition between the two companies began, "whereby the natives, or our own people, or both, took advantage to raise our goods prodigiously."⁵ To these earlier prices the Court wished to revert; and for this purpose all sorts of persons were to be encouraged to sell their wares to the Company, and the Company's servants were to be sent out quietly to the various markets to make advantageous bargains.⁶ But Governor Russell, according to the Court, paid no attention to these matters. He left everything to his Indian broker, and the broker was a villain. Through the negligence of the Governor the broker monopolised all the trade. He took commission on all that was bought;⁷ by threats and violence he prevented any merchants from offering their wares at rates lower than what he had fixed;⁸ he engrossed provisions of all sorts and sold them to the ships captains at exorbitant rates, for his private ends he instigated the local officers and rulers to extort presents of money from the Company and secretly spread a prejudice against the Company's rupees coined in Madras owing to which they were unduly depreciated in Bengal.⁹ In this way Janarddan Sett, beginning with but little, had made a large fortune through his English connection, and Varanasi Sett, whom Russell appointed broker after him, was following in his brother's footsteps.

Vehement denunciations of the broker and his understrappers fill many a paragraph of the letters from the Court of Directors to Bengal. "We have in our last letters,"¹⁰ say they in 1716, "especially told you the true Source of many of our Complaints of the badness and dearness of our Investments If that will awaken you to do better, well If not we will not rest with bare complaining as we have before herein intimated. Yet, in spite of the Court's commendations, further experience would seem to have vindicated Russell and Varanasi Sett. Rāmkrishna, dying in a few months, was succeeded by Harināth.¹ On the 14th April, 1719, the Calcutta Council in a long minute declared that Harinath was altogether unsuitable and that the only possible man to be broker was the much-abused Varanasi.² In fact the Setts were at this time the only merchants who could properly manage the investment at Calcutta. As specially qualified agents, then, the Setts deserved to be paid highly; as employers of labour they were right to fix fair prices for the goods they sold to the Company. And their prices were fair. It is on record that goods bought at Calcutta, in 1711, for £43,000, could be sold in France for more than £150,000;³ and it cannot be denied that the Company made enormous profits in consequence of its monopoly. The broker and his friends made profits too, but what of that? No one but the Court of Directors would maintain that the whole duty of man should consist in driving good bargains for the Hon'ble East India Company.

It is not, of course, pretended that there were no corrupt servants in Calcutta of whom the Court might justly complain. Both the collector's and the paymaster's office furnished flagrant examples of corruption. During his government Weltden appears to have employed the Indian Assistant Collector of Calcutta in levying blackmail and for several months bribery and oppression must have flourished unchecked.¹ The crooked dealings of Gonesh Rām, the paymasters' assistant, were less open and more difficult to detect. The various naval and military stores in his charge were not kept, it would seem, with any great care, and pilfering was easy. Still easier was it to quietly pocket the property of intestates whose relatives were too far off to make inconvenient enquiries. Thus in November, 1704, a certain Nicholas Audney of the Rising Sun smack died leaving no will,² and his goods were sold at public auction and the proceeds appropriated by "Gunesham." It was not till after seven years of enquiries, that the fraud was discovered and Audney's relatives were able to recover the money;³ and it was not till the year 1715 that "Gunesham" was removed from the paymaster's office.⁴ In 1711, gross irregularities were discovered in the conduct of the paymaster himself. Josiah Chitty who had held the post during the previous year was proved to be heavily in debt and to have misappropriated the Company's cash. He was at once dismissed from the service and stricter rules were introduced into the office.⁵

If the Company's servants went astray it was certainly not for want of good instruction. Directions as to the maintenance of discipline abound in the letters from the Court. "Send us annually an account how many factors and how many writers are necessary to be employed under the several persons that are of Council or others that have the management of the respective branches of our mercantile affairs under their care."⁶ "Enquire from time to time of all factors and writers how the Captains use them in the voyage; enquire also of the Several Captains how the factors and writers behave themselves in the voyage and give us a particular account by the next letters."⁷ "At certain stated seasons set apart a time to enquire into the behaviour of all our factors and writers, and calling them before you let them know the account you have of them and as they deserve either admonish or commend them.”¹ If through pride or idleness they are neglectful of their duties or immoral in their life, give them fair warning; if they do not mind, dismiss them from the service.² “We require that all our unmarried young men do lodge in our own factory if there be accommodations—if not, make them—and not lie up and down in the town.”³

The Court of Directors believed that the allowances made for diet apart put temptation in the way of their servants and exposed them to drunkenness and lasciviousness.⁴ Therefore in order to take away “all occasions of debauchery and being tainted by ill example which is very infectious to young people and also to keep them under a regular and virtuous course of living,” the Directors ordered a general table to be kept.⁵ Accordingly by the 6th August, 1711, Russell gave orders that a general table should be provided for;⁶ but the change involved increased expenditure. The Directors,⁷ however, declared that they did not mind spending more, as their main design was to keep all their servants in Calcutta, under the eye of the Council, “and in a regular method of living, that Our affairs may be better attended than when every one went after his own inventions.” “But as we have been told,” they added, “that the increase of the charge arises from other causes, the keeping two tables one above stairs and the other below, which we dislike and will have but one for the future, and the great number of slaves and servants being fed at our charge, though we have no obligation to give them victuals.” The general table was not kept up long. In May, 1713, the Council unanimously resolved to abolish it on the ground of its great expense, and the impossibility of finding a good steward, and it does not seem to have been revived by Hedges.⁸

It was the repeatedly expressed wish of the Company that its servants should apply themselves to the study of the country languages, Hindustani and Persian. In Calcutta, accordingly, the Council hired a Persian teacher at five rupees a month and those who could learn to speak and write that language were offered a gratuity of two hundred rupees with the promise of promotion.⁹ “If the young men will not learn the languages of the country on the encouragement we have proposed," said the Directors, "we shall have a very mean esteem of them as to their abilities either to serve us or themselves. If any of those who are ranked in any one year's list do learn it, let them know that you will put them above others in the same list that don't, if their usefulness in our service otherwise is pretty near equal to the others. Though the Persian language is most useful on application to the great men yet the Moor's language has its advantage too. Encourage the learning of either; and we can see no reason why it should be more difficult than to learn French or other European languages in London, where the common discourse is only in English."¹ But these appeals met with hardly any response. At the time when the English were conducting their most important negotiations with the Court at Delhi there was no one in Calcutta who could even decipher the titles of Persian documents.² In 1716, it was stated that there was no one to translate the imperial rescripts except Mr Ravenhill who was too ill to do much. It was hoped that, when Mr Barker returned from Delhi, he would be able to make translations. Several of the Company's servants were learning Hindustani and found it useful. Persian was difficult and was less useful, and, with the exception of Barker and Cosles, no one cared to study it.³

With the development of Calcutta the cost of the Company's establishment grew at a rapid rate. During the early years of the rotation government the "charges general" were estimated at from Rs. 52,000 to Rs. 93,000. In the year 1709-10 they were Rs. 109,700. In the year 1710-11, the first year of Russell's government they rose at a bound to Rs. 196,800. This "amazing increase" was in "no way to be approved of" by the Court of Directors. They protested against the extravagant practice of advancing unnecessarily large sums of money to the paymaster which he might be tempted to misappropriate, as had been the case with the unfortunate Chitty, and they ordered Russell to consider how the expenses of the settlement could be retrenched.⁴

At the same time they saw that there must be some increase, but they pointed out that this should be counterbalanced by a corresponding increase in the town revenues. This is a topic to which the letter from the Court hark back with tedious iteration. "We have often told you," say they, "nothing but revenues has made the Dutch interest in India formidable. The like reason holds for our nation too ; we must of necessity be at a constant charge, when our severall servants manage all with the utmost fidelity and frugality, not only in the charge attending our trade, but in what is requisite for our defence to preserve our estate from sudden irruption and surprise of the natives, who will never want some pretence or other, if they see us unguarded and secure. Therefore for the sake of posterity we must have such a plantation of revenues as will by good and constant cultivation produce a certain supply towards defraying this certain expense having a regard not to make the inhabitants uneasy by oppressing them. You write you can't suddenly lay any particular duty that will be sufficient to defray the present charge. But, granting that, should not the inference then be, though you can't do all, you will do what you can towards it and if you did so much as you could we should not find fault. But we have evident proof that instead of this there are some even amongst yourselves who secretly and rather than not obtain their point have openly opposed the increase of our revenues."¹

Thus according to the Court the revenues suffered greatly through abuses in levying tonnage and pass money allowed by Russell's government. Ships in which the Company's servants were interested were rated far too low, while other ships owned by private persons were not allowed to lade at Calcutta because their owners had not sufficiently "gratified" the President though they had paid all that was properly due.²

So too with the imposing of a duty on grain, a favourable project with the Court of Directors, which did not commend itself to the Council at Calcutta. The reasons urged against a grain duty were that it was opposed to local feeling and would provoke the interference of the Indian rulers. But the Directors declared the real reason to be that their own servants were concerned with the grain trade as so wished to escape the tax.³ The controversy on the subject lasted on well into the days of the Hedges administration, and was only settled by the peremptory orders sent from home in 1716.⁴ On the 4th September an order was passed imposing a duty of three and three quarters per cent. on all grain imported to or exported from Calcutta ; but the revenues do not seem to have benefited to any great extent.⁵

Happily the Directors had better ideas as to how their financial position at Calcutta might be improved. They saw that the revenues would increase with the population and that the population would increase if the Government was just and the town safe and healthy. The Court declared again and again that righteousness is at the root of prosperity. "Let your ears be open to complaints and let no voice of oppression be heard in your streets. Take care that neither the broker, nor those under him, nor your own servants use their patron's authority to hurt and injure the people. Go into the different quarters of the town and do and see justice done without charge or delay to all the inhabitants. This is the best method to enlarge our towns and increase our revenues."¹

At the end of the year 1717, we reached the closing scene of the life, and life's work, of Robert Hedges. Full of days and honours, with the approval of the Court of Directors, he was on the point of resigning his office after four years prosperous government. His embassy to the Mogul Court had returned crowned with success. In November the ambassadors, and the imperial rescripts they brought with them, were received in state by president and four of the Council at Triveni above Hugli,² and costly presents were made to the accompanying Mogul officials.³ On the 19th December Hedges was granted bills of exchange for Rs. 40,055, which at the rate of 2s. 9d. to the rupee, amounted to £5,507-11-3.⁴ On Saturday the 28th December the Consultations book records the President's death.

"The Honourable Robert Hedges Esq. late President having after a Sickness of nine days departed this Life at between six and seven a Clock this Evening, And the worshipful Samuell Feake, Esq. being next in Succession Who is now at Cossimbazar. It is Unanimously Agreed That wee Dispatch two Cossids to advise him thereof that if possible He may arrive before the dispatch of the Duke of Cambridge and that during his absence that Mr. James Williamson take the Charge of the Government."⁵

The will of the late president, dated the 26th December, 1717, was proved in the Council on the following 12th January, 1718. "Know all Men by These Presents that I Robert Hedges President in Bengall in the service of the Honourable United Company of Merchants

His wishes as to his burial were no doubt observed and no trace of any memorial to this governor remains in Calcutta. His only epitaph is found in a brief paragraph of a letter from the Directors to the Council at Calcutta.²

“ We are concerned for Mr. Hedges death,
And were in hopes he would have lived to return to England,
That We might have told him how well We accepted his services
In retrieving many of the evils which befel our affairs,
During the indolent and supine administration of his Predecessors.”

The Governour of Hugli wrote to inform the Council that he had received a letter from the Viceroy of Bengal, son of the Emperor, relating to English affairs. It was at once resolved that the President and three of the Council should go up to Hugli to visit the Governour and “hear what proposalls and offers are made” for a farmān for the English free trade within the Empire. At the same time they resolve not to give a positive answer until they have heard from Surat, as the English there had written to Calcutta, that they were sending to Court on the same business.

'Aẓīmu-sh-Shān's letter ordered Zeyāu-d-Dīn to find out how much the English were prepared to give for a farmān, and how they wished it worded. The President and his companions had told Zeyāu-d-Dīn that they could not give a definite reply until they had heard from Surat and from Fort St. George “after what manner their priviledges were in the late Emper^r. Aurangzēb's time.”

Zeyāu-d-Dīn Khān had not yet received the nishan, but he was daily expecting it, and he wanted to know what the English would give him for getting it. They answered “that when they they had the perusall of it they should be better able to judge of its worth.”

471.—A REBEL PLUNDERS CHAPRA.

Mr. Chitty had for some time been suspected of misappropriating the Company's Cash while he held the office of Bakhshī. At this Consultation the affair was enquired into, and Mr. Chitty dismissed the service.

“Mr. Josiah Chitty having been Buxie and Storekeeper for most part of Anno 1710 did sell severall of the Company's Stores, for which he was paid and also did at severall times make use of the Company's Cash which lay in his hands for the Company's Expences by paying the ballances of accounts due to severall Persons from himself he having made up his Year's accounts of the Stores and deliver'd them to the board for examination Mr. Samuell Blount who succeeding him in that Post finding severall Stores to come short of Mr. Chitty's ballances made and delivered to him and also finding no money in the Bannian's hands notwithstanding there remains due to the Company Rupees 7,027-14-8 on the ballance of Mr. Chitty's Account Current for the Month of February last Mr. Blount did some time ago acquaint this board of said Stores and Cash wanting of which in Consultation of the 6th inst. demands were made on Mr. Chitty for the amount of said Stores and the ballance of his Cash to which he answered that he would pay it and again in Consultation of the 10th inst. it was demanded by us and he then promised to pay it to us this day which he having not comply'd with and finding that in the little time he had the charge of the Import Warehouse that he made use of rupees 1,878-11 which he had received for Broad Cloth, etc. goods sold out, Our Honourable Masters instructions were sent for to see what they order in such Cases which we now having before us do find that by their Generall Letter, received per Ship Dutchess dated 26 February 1702 in their 20th and 26th paragraphs they positively enjoin us that none of their Servants should trade with or make use of their goods or Cash and if any are found unfaithfull that they be dismiss or Suspended Agreed therefore these matters being proved against him both by his own acknowledgement and by accounts signed by him that he be dismissed from the Hon^{ble} Company's Service Mr. Chitty being absent while we were Perusing our Masters orders and Consulting what to do in this affairs was sent for in and this Consultation read over to him We then asked him when he designed to pay the money he told us in a Month's time he would do it Ordered that the Accountant do Debtor him for the said Sum and that the Secretary do draw out a Bill of Debt for him to sign, wherein he is to allow Interest 12 Per Cent. per Annum for the amount above said which Bill he has signed Payable in a Month's time from the Date thereof with Interest thereon from Primo March last."

480.—THE DĪWĀN'S TERMS.

A letter is received from Messrs. Hedges and Page at Cassimbazar, to the effect that they can find no way of getting the July 13th. Dīwān's sānad for a less sum than 45,000 rupees, and that it is quite likely that the Dīwān will require a further sum of 15,000 rupees for himself. They think, however, that he may be prevailed upon to use his interest to procure the king's farmān for the Company for the same money, and that he may be content to let the greater part of the money remain in the Company's hands until he has procured the said farmān for them. The Council in reply gave Messrs. Hedges and Page "liberty of complying with the Duan upon those Terms."

481.—DEPUTATION TO ZEYĀU-D-DĪN KHĀN. HOW DO YOU MEAN TO HELP US?

The Council ordered Mr. William Lloyd and Mr. James Williamson to pay a visit to the Governor of Hugli, Zeyāu-d-Dīn Khān, to ask him "whether the Prince's July 13th. Nishan be as yet come to hand or no if it is not to desire him to let us know in what manner he will propose to assist us for that the Duan has stopt all our business and now being high time for us to procure our Investments we must be obliged to apply ourselves to the Duan unless he can propose some way speedily to help us."

482.—COLD COMFORT FROM ZEYĀU-D-DĪN KHĀN.

Messrs. Lloyd and Williamson being returned from "Zoody Cawn's Court," reported that "he alledges that business July 18th. at Court always comes very slowly out more especially at this time the Rebels being very formidable near Dillee which so much employs the Court to find means to quell the rising growth thereof that no Certainty as to time could possibly be given for the coming of the Nishān but it might be expected to arrive every day and as it is possible for any one to confide in advices it for the business in generall concerning the Investments it's advisable on no pretence to defer it for before the time of it's coming in it was probable the Nishan would arrive which would hinder the Duan from making any unreasonable demands but in no particular will he hear or advise us to Court the Duan in our affairs."

433.—THE DĪWĀN EXTORTIONATE AND THE COUNCIL DESPERATE.

Another letter from Mr. Hedges, saying that the Dīwān "will come to no Terms under Rs. 45,000 for the Prince and Rs. 15,000 for the King under which Sums he will by no means grant us his Sunnud besides as they write us there will be some thousand of Rupees as contingent charges to severall officers, now we seriously considering the Vastness of his demands which if paid him t'is probable he may come on us for an after Clap of a Sum for himself which he has done on the Dutch, who notwithstanding they have a Phirmaund and a Nishan yet has stopt their business demanding 33,000 rupees for himself." The Council write to Mr. Hedges that if he cannot persuade the Duan to give them his Sunnud with promise of aid in obtaining a Phirmaund for 30,000 Rupees "of which we will oblige the Merchants to pay one third" he is to tell the Duan "that we have ordered them down and that we will, since he stops our Masters affairs stop all Moors Ships from passing by our Fort, and that we acquaint the Emperor that the Present is now ready to be sent him We staying only for his Passports as also to acquaint him how the Duan impedes our affairs."

434.—CURED BY A CAPUCHIN.

"Mr. William Spencer having lain ill a long time with a great Lameness in his Leg to that degree that he could get no Cure here without cutting of it off by the opinion of our Doctors but at last meeting with a Capuchin Fryar at Hugly who after abundance of trouble has made a Cure of him Agreed We allow him 100 Rupees to give the Capuchin for his pains and trouble."

435.—COMPLAINT TO ZEYĀU-D-DĪN KHĀN.

They write to "Zoody Cawn" telling him about the Dīwān, and that they "are writing to the Emperour and to the Prince his Son, and to the Vizier acquainting them that our Present for the Emperour is ready and will shortly be sent to Court;" they ask "Zoody Cawn" to write some letters to send with theirs to his friends at Court "to utter our grievances."

486.—THE SAIL CLOTH FARMED TO CAPTAIN HENRY HARNETT.

“On Examining into the accounts of the Weaving Shop we find it to produce no Profit and that the Sail Cloth made there comes out very ordinary and Captain Henry Harnett undertaking to make it much better then what the black fellows do; offers to farm it and to pay into the Hon^{ble} Comp^{as}. cash 200 rupees the 25th of March next and from that time 600 rupees annually, also to sell the Company what Sail Cloth they shall want at 2 rupees per piece and Cordage 1 rupee per maund cheaper then to other people and to buy all their Utensils in Case we will grant him a Licence for the same and that none other shall have liberty to make it without licence from him Agreed that the Secretary do draw out a Licence for him upon those Terms it being a sure advantage to our Hon^{ble} Masters of about 1,000 Rup^s. per Annum besides the benefit of having better Sail Cloth and Cordage.”

July 31st.

487.—A GENERAL TABLE TO BE PROVIDED.

“Ordered that the Buxey do make immediate provision for a Generall Table for the Hon^{ble} Comp^{as}. Servants according to their orders now received.”

August 6th.

488.—THE COUNCIL RESOLVE TO TURN THEIR FACES TO FORTUNE.

596.—THE YEARLY PRESENT OF 3,000 RUPEES.

“The Yearly Piscash of 3,000 Siccaes, being due in Aprill last, And July 4th. we then being Uncertain, who was King, deferred the Paying of it, But the King now Setting on his Throne at Delly, Agreed we pay it.

597.—A LETTER TO BE WRITTEN TO JAHĀNDAR SHĀH.

“Agreed we write a Congratulatory Letter in Persians to Moezedeem July 4th. [Mu’izzu-d-Dīn] the Present Emperour, writing the Usual Complements and as full as the Persian tongue Affords, Also that we write another Letter to his Chief Minister Zulphaker Cawn [Zū-l fiqar Khān], desireing him to Present our Letter to the King, and move in our behalf for his Royall favour, And to Acquaint him that We have a Present lyes ready for to be Sent to his Majesty, 'and that he would use his Interest with the King for his Husbullhookum [hasbu-l-hukum], and Orders for the Safe Conveyance of it, And that we Shall depend upon him for procuring us his Majesties Protection, Agreed the Coppy of the two Letters to be wrote be Annexed to this Consultation."

598.—FARRUKHSIYAR SEIZES THE DUTCH GOODS AT PATNA.

The Council received letters from Mr. Pattle, etc., at Patna, to the effect that, on the death of Mr. Vanhorne,¹ Monday, July 7th. the Dutch Chief at Patna, the King had sent and seized all the goods, etc., of the Dutch Factory declaring that, as Mr. Vanhorne died without heirs, his goods, by the law of the land, belonged to the King.

"This piece of Injustice to the Dutch puts them under no little Apprehension of Shareing the Same fate, The Nabob of Patna being in good favour with the King, And he having Assisted them formerly hope that he will Still Stand their friend he promising them to use his Interest on their Account. They likewise Endeavour to keep in with the Muttsuddies [mutaṣaddis] and Favourites, with little Presents and fair words which they Esteem the only way to Preserve our Hon^{ble} Masters Effects; They Advise that being much Straitned for money, and that being Necessitated to bribe the Government and for Expences they have taken up at Interest 20,000 Rup^s. out of which Sum they have Sent 3,000 to Futtua [Fatūhā] for Cloth, but Advise as Yet they Shall Send no more."

599.—THE COUNCIL DISCLAIM ALL INTERFERENCE WITH POLITICS.

"Agreed we write a Letter to Patna, forbidding them to give a Mochulka [Muchalkā] and to let them know, that July 7th. we Cant but wonder that they Should believe we have been any ways Assisting to Mussudcooley Cawn Since that it is not the business of Merchants or Adviseable for us to Concern our Selves in the Government, we well knowing it must bring our Hon^{ble} Masters Affairs into Trouble."

September 16th. by the Rich men leaving Patna, That they have left off Providing Goods and believe the Sending down of the Comp^{as}-Goods cannot be Effected for that one main Reason of their Escape is the little Show they have made of Goods, having made the Government believe they had no money and but few Goods, So that to do business now must be their ruin, That the ways between Singia and Rajamaul [Rājmaḥāl] are but Indifferent, The Jemidars [zamīndārs] having Plundered the Kings own Boats and the King cannot move till after the Rains. . . Their Circumstances at present are better, That the Nabob has Exerted himself to Preserve the Town and has put his own Forces on the Gates with Orders to Oppose any that Shall Molest or offer to Plunder, That they have thought it necessary and by Advice of their Friends to make a present to the Nabob and his Officers Amounting to Rupees 6,500, who has promised to protect them and their Factorys and has given them two of his Servants for Patna, and two for Futtua [Fatūhā], to protect them, and has Sent them Severall Perwannoos."

The celebrated Armenian Merchant, Khojah Sarhad, had owed the Company money for some time. He had no effects in Calcutta wherewith to pay; but he told the Company that he had goods enough, and more than enough, to pay the debt with in Goa. He had also a vessel of his own at Calcutta laden with merchandise bought of the Company, but not paid for. The Council agreed to let the money for their own goods stand over and to send Khojah Sarhad's vessel under Captain Delaforce to Goa to fetch the merchandise he had there. Khojah Sarhad therefore made over his property in Goa, to the amount that he was indebted to the Company, to the United Council in form as follows:—

January 28th.

"Sen^r Agustine Robero and Cojah Nayur are Cojah Surhaud's Attornys in Goa and you are to receive from them, or the person that shall be present of them, the produce of such goods and Effects as they receive from Aga Peree belonging to Cojah Surhaud, and if all you shall receive from them do's not amount to considerably a greater sum then the Thirty Thousand Rupees, you are to receive it aboard your Sloop and return with it to us with all possible expedition, out of the produce whereof we will take care that your Wages and the Wages of your Sloops Company shall be paid. But if what shall be deliver'd you amounts to a much Greater Sum then Thirty Thousand Rupees, as Cojah Surhaud assures us it will, you are in that case if a good Ship may be bought reasonably cheap at Goa to assist Cojah Surhauds Attorneys or the Person that Shall be present of them with your advice in Buying her, and we order when she is bought that you quit the Sloop, and take the command of the Ship on you, and that Walter Welsh be your mate aboard her, and that you receive aboard her all Cojah Surhauds Effects that shall be delivered you, leaving nothing to be put aboard the Sloop till you have the amount of at least fifty Thousand Rupees aboard the Ship, and when you have that full amount aboard her, we consent, if Cojah Surhauds Attorney or Attornys desire it that what shall remain be laden aboard the Sloop, and we enjoyn you to take what care you can to see that the Person appointed to be master of her be a Seaman fitly qualified to take Charge of her, he must receive his orders from you, and you are to order him to make the best of his way directly for Calcutta in Bengall.

If no ship proper for that service can for a reasonable price be bought at Goa, and if there be a Ship there belonging to Englishmen and bound for Bengall, we consent that so much of Cojah Surhauds Effects as shall exceed the amount of thirty Thousand Rupees to be laden on Freight on board her, but we would have the full amount of Thirty thousand Rupees be with you aboard the Sloop.

If it should happen (which God forbid) that you shall get nothing from Cojah Surhauds Factor or Attorneys in Goa of the effects he says he has there, bring the returns in Arrack, or anything else you can get that is proper for this Markett for the produce of the small Cargoe now aboard you, and stay no longer at Goa than the last day of Augst. if no misfortune or unforeseen accident do not detain you.

In case you have the misfortune not to Save your passage to Goa (which God forbid) follow such directions as Cojah Surhaud shall give you about disposing of your Cargoe at any Port where you shall be Obligated to stay and proceed thence by such conveyance as you shall judge best either by sea or Land to Goa, with the Letters and other papers mentioned in those Instructions, We wish you a prosperous Voyage and are

On the 22nd Zū-l-hijjah the Khutbah was read at the great mosque in the name of the new Emperor Farukhsiyar. See Irvine in op. cit., pp. 204 to 207.

733.—THE GENERAL TABLE.

For some time past the Council had been complaining about May 18th. the expenses of the 'General table,' and they now decide to put the Gentlemen of the Comp. on board wages. Their reasons for doing so were as follows—

"Considerations relating to the General Table.

"Tis reasonable to suppose that many People at one Table might feed well for less mony then the same number can be indifferently provided for singly for where many sit at one table there may be plenty and variety without wast It may therefore seem a wonder how it comes to pass that a Generall Table is found to be at least treble the expence of what board wages to the Comp^{as} Servants will amount to tis therefore a Duty incumbent on us to give some reasons for it and those may be.

"The Stewards have been Ignorant, negligent or careless of their business 'tis equall which, for either gives Black Servants opportunities which they seldom (if ever) Slip of cheating and of stealing all they can convey away. If a Steward be a perfectly honest man that can signify little, except he understands his business and is carefull in the mannagement of it, for 'tis equall to the Company whether he cheats them or lets others do it.

"It is to no purpose to shift our Stewards, for we have hitherto found no benefitt by changing them.

The Churchburdars* for want of being well Lookt after have by degrees more then doubled the Price of all provisions especially (of what we consume most) Goates and Fowls.

The Cooks and multitude of servants under them in the Kitchen are extravagantly wastfull which (without more care then it is possible for us to take) cannot be remedied their wasting and thieveing together does more then double the consumption of stores and provisions.

Which two last articles alone do quadruple the expence. The Butlers and Mussalchees† are not less faulty in the distruction of Table Linnen, Dishes and Plates, etc.

The business of a Steward requires the constant application of a person who should understand all parts of that business, and if such a person could be found he ought to be very carefull and Diligent and not employed in any other affair to divert him from his care of that.

* Khurburdars caterers.

† Mash'alchīs, torch-bearers, here dish-washers.

But 'tis next to impossible to find a person capable of being a good Steward who will be content to confine himself to that business which if he gives the necessary application to will deprive him of every opportunity of (honestly) getting anything for himself and of improving his knowledge in other Parts of the Companys affairs.

If once we had the fortune to get a good steward he cannot continue always, and 'tis a million to one if another be found to Succeed him.

These considerations taken together make it seem fitt and necessary to break off the Generall Table and give the Companys Servants board Wages, which by a moderate computation will save at least 3,000 Rup^s. per month, and that sum will be a good help towards defraying the Military Charge, and charge of the Garrison, 'tis therefore unanimously agreed and Ordered

That the Generall Table be broke off the last of this Month, and board Wages be allowed to all the Comp^{as}. Servants from that day forward, viz^t.—

To each of the Councill Rup^s. 40 per Month, to all other Merchants, Factors and Writers and to the Docters each Rup^s. 20 per Month.

Ordered that the Presidents Table be limited to the expence of 300 Rs. per Month for provisions, besides Wine and other Liquors.

751.—THE COMPLAINT OF MARY GRATON.

“Mary Graton, the Widdow of Paul Graton, late deceased, complain-July 6th. ing that Mr. John Watts, the Executor of her deceed. husbands Will, refused to pay her the proportion due to her or any part of Rup^s. 1,500 which was left in his the said John Watts his hands by the dece^d. Paul Graton before he proceeded on his last Voyage to be a provision for his Wife and Child, in case of his Death and that the rest of his Estate became lost by any misfortune. The said Watts was sent for and required to give his reasons for detaining her Proportion of the said money in his hands, which (because of her great necessity for she has nothing Else in her power which she and her Child may subsist on), She often demanded and earnestly intreated Mr. Watts to pay her, or some part of it but he allways positively refused to pay her anything.

“Mr. Watts acknowledges all she alledges to be true and pretends his reason for refusing to pay her any part of the money in his hands is because the French Directore and Council at Hugly have all the rest of her deced. Husbonds Estate in their hands of which he the said John Watts, says he supposes they will pay her her proportion, tho’ he acknowledges they possitively refuse to let him have any part of it, which (if Mr. Watts does in earnest suppose it) is an unreasonable and groundless Supposition for we all know the French Governr. do’s as yet refuse to pay her any Part as possitively as they refuse to pay him. Her proportion of her deced. Husbonds Estate is one Third of the whole whether good or bad debts, and Mr. Watts should not pretend to keep all the ready money in his hands, and put her off with a proportion of a doubtfull debt in the French hands, We therefore told him he ought in justice to pay her the proportion due to keep herself and Child from starving to which he arrogantly replyed if he pays her any thing we must compell him to do it for without force he will not pay her anything, which Insolent reply is unreasonable, and does not argue intention in Mr. Watts to deal fairly and Justly by the Woman or her Child; We therefore told him he must pay her the proportion due to her, but he again reply’d we might force him but not make him consent to pay her any thing, and with Insolent, threatning Language said, he knew how, and would make us answer for any Force we should put upon him. For his Contempt ’tis therefore Agreed That the said John Watts justly deserves we should withdraw the Protection we have hitherto afforded him But in hopes he may become better inclined to do what is right and just by the Woman and her Child we shall give some time before we proceed to extremity with him.”

752.—FURTHER COMPLAINT OF MARY GRATON.

“Mary Graton, the Widdow of Paul Graton, Deceased, presented her July 9th. Petition before us wherin She sets forth that she did, as the Will of her Deceased Husband directos, tender her Child Gabriell Graton to the care of his Executor Mr. John Watts, but that he in the presence of two Wittnesses did refuse to take the Child into his care or to pay the proportion due to her of 1,500 rs. left in Mr. Watts his hands by Paul Graton before he proceeded on his last Voyage to be a provision for his Wife and Child in case of his death or other misfortunes, She therefore prays that we will Prevail with Mr. John Watts to do her Justice, Agreed That her said Petition be considered of at another time.”

753.—MR. WATTS FINED.

“Ordered That Mr. Watts for the Indecent Language he gave the July 13th. Governour and Councill the 6th Inst. pay as a fine to the Church Rupees 50, and that he be warn'd to get ready to depart from Bengall by this years Shipping for England.”

754.—A CODICIL TO GRATON'S WILL REGISTERED.

“Ordered That a Copy of a Codicil to Paul Graton, deceased, his July 14th. Will attested by the French Secretary, be register'd after this Consultation.”

755.—MR. WATTS'S ATTEMPT TO DEFRAUD MARY GRATON.

“Mr. John Watts being sent for, his reasons were demanded for July 14th. Refusing to take Paul Graton's Child into his care which the Widdow Graton tender'd to him as her dece'd. Husbands Will directed his answer was he would not do it except that part of Paul Gratons Estate which is in the hands of the French Directore in Hugly be recover'd. And he added that he had yet near a Years time to consider whether he would accept or relinquish the Executorship which can scarce bare a better construction than that if he cannot gain considerably by the Executorship in case of the Infant Gabriell Gratons decease whilst under the age of 21 Years he will relinquish, but upon a prospect of Gain by the Childs death he is willing to accept the Executorship this the Will Sign'd by Paul Graton explains, which Will was fram'd by Mr. John Watts himself, and the Copy from which Mr. William Spinks writ it fair was all of Mr. Watts his own hand-writing these circumstances being considered, we can no longer perswade the Widdow Graton to put her Child into Mr. Watts his care who will not accept of the charge except on such terms as may make the Childs death become his Interest.

There is another circumstance worth notice, and that is

Paul Graton sometime after he had sign'd the Will which he left with Mr. Watts, reflecting on the Injustice he had don his Wife in giving him two thirds and her but one third of his Estate in case of the Childs death, wrote a Paper in form of a Codicill to his Will with his own hand in French, the only Language he could write, for he was a Refugee, and could not write English nor speake it but imperfectly. In that Codicil (an attested Copy of which we have sealed with the Comp^{as}.
 Seal to the Originall Will) Paul Graton declares he leaves his whole Estate to his Wife in case his Child shall dye in Bengall, and that

Mr. Watts is to account with his Wife and Child for a Catty* and half of Gold value about Rup^s. 1,500, which he left in John Watts his hands; Mr. Watts acknowledges to have reced. that Gold which he says amounted at 12 Rup. for one Rupee weight to Rup^s. 1,489-14, for which sum he sold it.

“We therefore considering the distress of the Widdow Gratton and her child for they have nothing they can depend on for subsistance but the money in Mr. Watts his hands which he has not hitherto given them any part off do order that he pay the whole Summ into the Companys Cash the Interest whereof will be a help towards maintaining the poor Widdow and her Child.”

The Prisoner appearing and two Wittnesses, Andreas Hendrickson, and Christian Toonis, being sworn, the Substance of their deposition is as follows—

They both Lodged and boarded in the same House with Jean Suin, the Prisoner, and on Saturday the 25th July last after nine at night William Hall knocked at the outward door and demanded admittance, but the people of the House refused to admitt him, saying he might come in the morning if he had business, but no body should come in so late at night, whereupon William Hall got over the Wall into the Compound with his Naked Sword hid under his Coate and op'ned the Door which gave admittance to Ensigne John Browne and Thomas Stacey who immedeatly rusht in the prisoner then had no sword about him, but apprehending violence went in and brought his out and held it conceal'd behind his back, which William Hall perceiving attackt him and drove him into a Corner from whence he could not retreat further. William Hall Wounded Jean Suin, Prisoner, by a thrust from near the wrist to the Elbow of the sword arm and in his hand, the Prisoner endeavour'd to defend himself by striking and Pushing at Hall, and gave Hall a Wound on his right hand, and another In his Belly which for some time was not apprehended to be deep or dangerous, but of which he Dyed on the Wednesday following as appears by the testamony of our two Surgeons, Mr. W^m. Hamilton and Mr. Richard Harvey. Ensigne John Browne and Mr. Thomas Stacey Doctors mate being examined they both deny that they went with William Hall to the House but confess they supt with him at Ensignes Brownes and after Supper Hall parted from them pretending he would go to Richard Accoms House to speake with him and sometime after they two walking abroad past by the House where William Hall and Jean Suin, the Prisoner, were fighting, and finding the Door open went in to part them Ensigne Browne also says he went thence immediately to call a Guard, but that Thomas Stacey Staid behind. The Wittneses Hendrickson and Toonis being again Examined they both depose that Ensigne John Browne and Tho. Stacey came in immediately upon Halls opening the Door and before Jean Suin the Prisoner, brought out his sword and they encourag'd Hall by saying, 'Prick him, Kill him.'

 hopes of Living who acknowledged that he first attackt Jean Suin, the Prisoner, and said with an oath that he drove him into a Corner.”

781.—NEGOTIATIONS AT HUGLI.

"Last night received a Letter from Mess^{rs}. Hedges and Williamson at Hugly dated the 9th Inst. advising that they had vizited Meir Nazir, the Deputy Governour, September 10th.

who told them we ought to send a Vaqueell to the Duans Durbar to make up our business he being both Duan and Neib Suba, and had thereby power to molest our Trade; to which Mess^{rs}. Hedges and Williamson reply'd they believed he had not the Kings authority for it, and if they Should come to an agreement with him, he would find some means to break it again, as had often been experienced therefore to send a Vaqueell would be a certain charge, without the prospect of a Benefitt. Meir Nazir then advised them to apply to the Kings Durbar, which they told him we were preparing to do, and that part of our Present to his Majestie was sent to Pattna. After this Permannund, etc., Custom house Officers were sent for, who told Mess^{rs}. Hedges and Williamson their orders were, not to use force to stop our Goods, but to give the King's 'Dohie,'¹ and take account of our Goods, which was all they yet could do against our superiour Force. Mess^{rs}. Hedges and Williamson answered they came to give the King's 'Dohie' and let them know that whoever gave orders for molesting our Trade must answer the Ill consequences to the King, and they should find by it they had stopt the Trade up and down the Ganges therefore it was the best way for them to encrease the Kings Revenues, not to molest us. The Publick Writers noted what was said on both sides. Meir Nazir and Permanund desired Mess^{rs}. Hedges and Williamson to stay two or three days at Hugly for the Duans answer."

782.—RUNAWAY SAILORS SEIZED.

"Mess^{rs}. Hedges and Williamson being returned from Hugly September 14th. report that no written answer coming from the Duan, tho' the time it was promised in was some days past and the Messenger who was sent to Lahoreemull being come back without any Letters but a Verball message to the Custom house officers, the contents of which they Could not learne, they Judged it vain to stay longer at Hugly, therefore they came thence last Saturday and arrived here that night. Whilst they were at Hughly they sent a Party of men into the Bandell to take up some of the King Williams men who had run away with that Ships Yaul, 4 of which were Caught and sent down hither and on Thursday last, having intelligence that 6 of the Cardigans men were also run away with that Ships Boat and Shel-tred in the Bandell, they sent a Party who took them all and sent them hither together with King the Kiddnapper who inticed them away and harboured them.² Their thus taking away the fugitive Sailors by Force will, we hope, have the good Effect of making the Hugly Government believe we in Earnest resolve not to Submit tamely to their designed Interrupting of our affairs."

783.—GOOD EFFECT OF GOING TO HUGLI.

Messrs. Hedges and Williamson their going to Hugly has had this good Effect that the Custom house Officers September 17th. there have had orders to take off the stop they had put on our Affairs which they have accordingly done, and therefore we have cleared Severall Mogulls Boats which were stopt here.

“Be it Known to whom it may concern that I, John Evans, Marriner, Inhabitant of Calcutta, for or toward security of Payment of a certain sum of mony due and owing from me to Mr. Isaac Berkly, Merchant of said place, as per my Bond dated the 27th Dec. 1709, and not being cleared as will appear per endorsment of said Bond, have made over and assigned unto him, the said Isaac Berkly, my dwelling house and Compound Situate on the Bank of this River, and adjacent to the now dwelling house of Mr. Edward Pattle; That is to say in case of non payment or satisfaction of that my fore Specified Bond or obligation according to the Tenour of it, that then and in such case my fore-said House and Compound shall be and remain unto the Said Isaac

796.—ALL MOGUL SHIPS TO BE STOPPED.

“Upon advice from our Vacquell at Hugly that the Government there have stopt all our Trade by order of the Duan and Lahowrimull and will not permitt our bringing from thence the Sugar we had contracted for, for the Cardigan and Hannovers Kintledge, or Suffer any Freight, Bales, to come hither, which Mr. Ange who went up thither to Weigh and bring down the Sugar Confirms being obliged to return without it. Agreed that we suffer no Moors Ships or Boats to pass up or down this River till the Government at Hugly permitt our Trade to pass Currently there, and that we Send Soldiers to Stop Two Ships that have already past this Fort Downwards. Agreed that we order a Guard of a Serjeant and 6 Soldiers at Chuttanutte and a Sarjeant and 6 Soldiers at Govinpore, also ten Buckserrys on the other side the water opposite to each place to prevent any Boats passing up or down this River.”

797.—PAYING THE RENT OF THE PERSIAN AMBASSADOR'S HOUSES.

“Severall Houses were hired to Entertain the Persia Ambassador and his numerous Retenue during the time he was here, the Rent whereof, amounting to Rs. 805-8, was at times as it grew due paid by the Buxey by the Generall consent of us all and is not yet charg'd to Account, 'tis therefore order'd that it be allowed off and that the Buxey charge it in this Months account of Generall expences. The reasons for giving the Ambassador and his Retenue House room Rent Free are because 'tis always required by the Mogull that Ambassadors from Persia have free quarter everywhere in his Dominions, as his also has in Persia, and we judge it might be an injury to the Comp^{as}. affairs now much Embroyled in Persia if we Should be Less Compleasent then is Customary to the Persia Ambassador.”

798.—COMPLAINT AGAINST DR. KETTLE.

“Whereas in Consultation 20th August upon a Complaint of some November 23rd. soldiers on the Cardigan that Dr. Kettle, Surgeon of that Ship, did not take due care of them in the Voyage, it was ordered that it be referr'd to the Comp^a. to decide whether he deserves their Gratuity of 10 s. a head for his care of those Soldiers, but upon Second examination of that Matter we find he is a German and speaks broken English, but ordinarily, the Soldiers that accused him were once ripe for a mutiny aboard Ship, but nipt in time, which appears by the Testimony of Capt. Granger, and some of his officers, and none but those mutineers complained,

Some other soldiers who had been Sick were called and they attested all necessary care was taken of them, we therefore alter the ill opinion we had of Dr. Kettle and order that the Gratuity of 10 s. a head be paid him for the 52 Soldiers that came on the Cardigan which amounts to R^s. 208, agreeable to the Comp^{as}. order.”

orders from the formentioned Gentlemen to buy the ship Thomas after She had compleated her Voyage to Surratt and was arrived safe at Madrass which he accordingly did (those orders not being contradicted) and advised them of it, against which they never objected till She was unfortunatly cast away, coming down hither from that place, which Mr. Addams acknowledges to be true, and having submitted it to our determination we unanimously agree that [they] were concerned as owners of the Ship Thomas, and that they accordingly pay their Part of the Loss.”

Ordered that the Ockoon [Ākhūnd] carry it to Hugly and get Coppys thereof attested by the Cozee [Qāzi].”

January 4th.

813.—CONSEQUENT REJOICINGS.

“The Husbull Hookum arriving last night under the Grand Viziers Seal ordering the Duan Jaffer Cawne not to molest us but to let our Trade pass with the same Freedom and Priviledge we enjoyed in the days of our Predecessors it became necessary to make a Publick show of Rejoycing for that favour from the King which was don in the following manner After three Volleys of Small Shot from all our Soldiers we began the Healths of Our Queen and of King Furruckseer firing 51 great Guns to each health after which we drank prosperity to the Hon^{ble} Comp^a. with 31 Guns and Success to their Trade with 21 Guns more and all the Ships in the Road fired at every health, after this at night we order’d a Large Bonfire to be made and gave our Soldiers a tub of Punch to Chear their harts, we also ordered our Merchants to write to their Correspondents everywhere of this Husbull Hookum and how greatly we Honour and Esteem the Kings Gracious favour and what Rejoycings we made at it.”

January 4th.

814.—THE CONSTITUTION OF THE EMBASSY TO DELHI.

“Upon considerations long under suspence who of the Hon^{ble} Companys Servants should be sent with our Present to the Mogulls Court to Solicite for his Royall Phirmaund we now enter’d into the debate and Mr. John Surman being proposed to go Chief in that negotiation it was put to the Vote and carry’d by a great Majority for him. After which

January 5th.

Mr. John Pratt was proposed for Second and Mr. Edward Stephenson for Third, and they were unanimously Elected."

815.—KHOJAH SARHAD TO BE A MEMBER.

January 5th. "It was also unanimously agreed that Coja Surhaud whose Interest at Court has already had the good Effect of procuring us the Husbulla Hookum and Severall other usefull orders from Court be sent to assist in suing for the Kings Phirmaund and that he sit and Vote in Council along with the three English Gentlemen."

816.—HAMILTON TO BE DOCTOR TO THE EMBASSY.

January 5th. "It being necessary one of our Surgeons go up with the Gentlemen who go with the Present, Agreed therefore that Dr. Hamilton be sent."

817.—OBJECTIONS TO THESE ARRANGEMENTS.

January 5th. To this arrangement, two of the Council, Mr. Addams and Mr. Feake, made objections, especially opposing the appointment of Mr. Surman as chief in the negotiations. They wished Mr. Frankland, (the last in the Council) to go as chief, and Mr. Surman to be second. Their objections were three in number: first, that to send one of the Council as chief would shew the Emperor more respect, and that a member of the Council would be better received than an ordinary writer. Secondly, that at least two capable Englishmen ought to go, in order that, if one died, the other could take his place; both should have a good knowledge of Persian, so that, should the head of the expedition die, the negotiations would not be left entirely to Khoja Sarhad, who would most likely enrich himself at the Company's expense if not well looked after. Thirdly, that the Court of Directors in England had ordered them to take "advise with" the Madras Council before they sent up people with the present; that the Gentlemen at Madras had proposed that Mr. Frankland should be associated with Mr. Surman; further, Mr. Pratt is "not any ways accomlisht to succeed in case of mortality in the mannagement of an affair of this nature."

818.—THE OBJECTIONS ANSWERED.

January 5th. To these objections the rest of the Council answered: First, that the great Mogull put such a high "Value on his own Grandure that he can regard nothing in other men, but their quallifications and would not esteem any man meerly for quality tho' he were Peer of the greatest Monarchy in Europe," and the reception he would give Ambassadors would be such that he would never know nor care to know the rank of the man to be received. "The hint concerning the reception at the Mogull Court seems to require some account of the reception to be expected there which [we] take as follows:— 'Whoever the Great Mogull is pleased to Honour with leave to appear in his presence will after he is disarmed be admitted into a Court Yard where he must stand exposed to the weather, (whatever it happens to be) at the appointed distance which will be out of hearing a word the King shall speak, who looking out at a window a Story high in his Pallace every man in sight of him must stand with his Arms a little crossing on his Stomack and his Toes close together without presuming to look up, when the King goes from his Window a Curtain is lett fall and every man in the Court Yard Shuffles away without observing any order this is a Short account of the reception the King will give, but his Ministers generally admit Forreigners to sett Cross Legged in their Presence and talk to them but scarcely of their business for that must be treated by means of their under officers.' "

To the second objection, the Council answered that two capable Englishmen should certainly be sent to Court, and that was why they had associated Mr. John Pratt and Mr. Edward Stephenson with Mr. Surman. There were thus three Englishmen to look after Cojah Surhaud, all quite capable of seeing that he played no tricks.

To the third objection, they answered that they had several times written to the Governor and Council of Madras, who had told them in reply that there was no person in Madras so suitable to be sent to negotiate at the Court, as the men in Bengal, Mr. Surman and the others. The Council of Madras had only recommended Mr. Frankland of whom they had a good character for ability and knowledge of the "Indostan Language" if there were any doubt of the other men being fit for the post.

819.—A VAKIL SENT TO MAQŞUDĀBĀD.

"Several Coppys of the Kings Husbull Hookum [Ḥasbu-l-ḥukum] being wrote and attested by the Cozee [Qāzi] of January 5th. Hugly it is necessary that we send one to Jaffer Cawne [Ja'afar Khān] the Duan [Diwān] at Muxadavad and that we keep a Vacqueel at his Durbar. Agreed that Ramchund be our 21.—REASONS FOR SARHAD'S APPOINTMENT.

January 27th.

“Reasons for appointing Cojah Surhaud
Second in the Negotiation at the Great Mogulls Court—

1st.—He managed our affairs in Mahmud Azeems* Durbar and by his prudent conduct and winning address insinuated himself into favour and procured for us the Grant of this Place and the Dependant Towns which we now enjoy and that for a small expence in comparison of the Benefit.

2nd.—He was personally known to Prince Feruckseer† the present King then about fourteen years old and made him Presents of Toys at that time very acceptable for which he exprest a great deal of satisfaction often sending for Cojah Surhaud and making him sett by him many hours to show what uses they were for this we believe the King remembers and is probably one cause of his readily ordering a Husbull Hookum [Hasbu-l-hukum] for us at the request of Cojah Surhauds Friends and Agents at Court and appointing him to be particularly named in that, and all the Perwannaes [pārwanās] we lately received commanding safe conduct for him also for our Present and the English Gentlemen that shall accompany it.

3rd.—It is absolutely Necessary that some Person who is Perfect Master of the Persian Language and understands our affairs very well and what may be usefull for us be sent and we know no man so qualified in both these respects as Cojah Surhaud is he is therefore the fittest man we can send.

4th.—If we should send him as Vacqueel [vakil] only and Inferiour to all the English Gentlemen we may reasonably suppose the King would in that case regard him most which would be an affront to our Nation but that is not now likely to happen because he is joyned in Commission and Second in Negotiation and it will be his Interest to get favour and respect for the whole.

5th.—The English gentlemen are sent because they may be a Check up on him on all occasions and see that he does not misapply the Companys Goods or mony nor be more expensive on any occasion than is absolutely Necessary.”

* That is 'Azimu-sh-Shān. This refers to the negotiations in 1697-98; see vol. I, p. 150.

† Muhammad Farrukhsīyar, the second son of 'Azimu-sh-Shān, was born at Aurangābad on the 19th Ramaṣān 1094H., i.e., 11th September 1683. In his infancy he was sent to Delhi, but in his tenth year, i.e., in 1105H., or 1693-94 A.D., he was brought back to the Deccan. After spending three years with his great-grandfather, the Emperor Aurangzēb, he accompanied his father, 'Azimu-sh-Shān, to Agra and thence to Bengal.

"All which considerations being unanimously agreed to, We do appoint that Mr. John Surman be First Cojah Surhaud Second and Mr. John Pratt Third in this Negotiation and that they Consult together upon all occasions and act according to the Result of their Consultations. And that they may not want sufficient help nor have any reasonable cause to keep the account of their Transactions or of expences behindhand we do appoint Mr. Edwd. Stephenson Secretary and Accomptant to the Negotiation and we order that he be present and the Minutes when they sit in Consultation.

822.—TERMS AGREED ON WITH KHOJAH SARHAD.

"Cojah Surhaud being thus Elected Second in this negotiation the Terms agreed to with him are next to be explained
 January 27th. and those are Viz^t.

First if all the privileges the Company have at any time heretofore enjoyed in the Mogulls Dominions be confirmed in the New Phirmaund and if he getts our bounds enlarged as far as we desire that is Northward to near Bernagur Estward to the Lake and Southward to Kidderpoor and that the shore on the side of the River opposite to this place be also granted us, Also if he endeavour earnestly to get the Grant of Dew Island near Metchlepatam which the President and Councill at Madrass desire may be obtained for that Presidency his reward is then to be fifty Thousand Rupees, but he is to have nothing if he fails in those Points.

Secondly. If he procures the Priviledge for our Nation to Trade Custom Free at Surratt which he will attempt, he is to have fifty Thousand Rupees more for that service but if he fails in that he is not to have the reward, he is nevertheless to endeavour to get the Custom we pay at that Port reduced to $2\frac{1}{2}$ Per Cent."

823.—MORE GOODS FOR DELHI.

"Upon consideration that some Goods may be sold to advantage at the Kings Camp and the gains be a help to January 27th. defray the expence there, Also that severall things will be necessary to be added to what is allready allotted for the Present,
 It is agreed and ordered that the following particulars be Packt up to 837.—SITARĀM, A FUGITIVE LANDHOLDER, CONCEALED IN CALCUTTA.

“The following Diary is thought worth this Publick notice because if any further disturbance is given us upon account of Seettarams family and Servants the History of March 5th.

it may be revived at any time and answers given agreeable with it.”

“Letters and messengers from Meir Nassir Govr. of Hugly acquaint us that the Duan Jaffurcaun has February 11th. received information and believes that the Family of Seeteram late Jemeendaree of Boosna ly concealed in our Town and pretends to suppose they have Thirty Lacck of Rupees with them which he will demand of us for the Kings use if we conceal and Protect them Meir Nassur therefore perswades us as a friend to make diligent search and deliver them up with all that belongs to them if they are found for Seettarām being executed by the Duans order for Murder and Rebellion all his Effects belong to the King and where any small part be found, the Duan Will be glad of that pretext to make great demands especially from us, who he has had no late opportunity of Fleecing tho he has often sought for means and occasion to do it.

“This was a surprizeing message for we heard nothing of it before and being apprehensive of the danger of giving occasion for such pretences to be made and the necessity of timely preventing any that are contrived against Us we sent for all the Putwaris Shekdars Catwalls etc. black officers under our Jurisdiction and examined them in presence of Meir Nassirs messengers concerning the matter and every one affirmed for himself that he was not Instrumentall in concealing any of Seetrams Family and did not suppose any of them were concealed in our Towns, they could not be except one or other of themselves had harbour'd and conceal'd them upon which one of the men sent by Meir Nassir affirm'd that himself was one of those who the Duan had appointed and sent to discover and secure what he could of Seetrams Family or Effects and that he seized of Sevrall Seetrams Family in our Town and would have carried them away but they were taken out of his hands and carried before Harry More after which he could not discover whither they went but he suspects they lye concealed by some of our People because they are not heard of elsewhere and dilligent search has been made for them everywhere round us by the Duans Spies and Servants to which Harry More replied that some strangers washing in the River (as is the Gentues custom) suspected to be Seetrams Family were carryed before him, who he did not think it safe to concern himself with,

therefore let them be carryed away by the persons who brought them who possibly for a sum of mony may have let them excape or perhaps disposed otherwise of them and Ramnaut our Puttwarry of Govindpoor affirmed that the Duans Servants took them away and that he never heard of them since, after which we wrote a Letter to Meir Nassir promising to use all possible means to discover if any of Seeterams Family were concealed in our Towns and to send them to him if any should be found and so dismiss his Messengers."

838.—DISCOVERY OF THE FUGITIVES.

"The encouragement of 100 Rupees reward promised prevailed with two needy Persons to discover that Seeterams Family were concealed by Ramnaut, our Puttwarre March 3rd. at Govindpoor (the very Person who said the Duans servants carry'd them away) the men in his own House and the Weomen at another Place the President therefore sent two Trusty Servants and ten Peons along with the informers who found and brought away two Sons and a Daughter, all small Children, of Seeterams also six Women of his Family and four men Servants they also brought away Ramnaut, our Putwarree who by concealing and harbouring them endangered vast prejudice to our affairs in Bengall for the Duan Jaffurcaun seeks all occasions possible to imbroyle all the European Traders and has lately found means to Squeeze the French and Dutch, tho' we have hitherto baffled his endeavours against us. Haveing thus seized and secured Seetrams Familly and Servants we wrote immediately to Meir Nassir and gave him notice of it, desireing him to send officers to receive them and having promised before that if we could discover them we would assist his Servants with a Guard to see them safe conveyed and deliver'd into his care in Hugly We confirm'd that Promise."

839.—SURRENDER OF THE FUGITIVES ORDERED.

"Came to us an Express in four days from our Vackeell at Muxooda-March 4th. vad bringing the Duans Perwanna ordering us to deliver up Seeterams Family and Treasure which he Pretends is two Laack of Gold Mohurs and a Long Letter from our Vackeell by which we find the report of Seeterams Family being concealed at Calcutta was a pleasing pretence to the Duan who on the suspicion affirmed and procured such persons as would Wittness anything to attest possitively that they lay here concealed by our authority he also got a Story prepared to be entered in the Vacca affirming that we made Slaves of the Kings Mussleman subjects and sent 40 of them at a time to England, which thô impossible for us to do may cause suspicions or pretences of suspicion in some of the Kings High Officers at Court and occasion the more trouble and difficulty in the Negotiation of our affairs at Lis Durbar."

810.—THE FUGITIVES ARE SENT TO HUGLI.

Meir Nassir Governour of Hugly sent Sabray one of his head officers and a Guard to carry away Seeterams Family and what Effects should be found here belonging to them and after the necessary precautions such as getting receipts for them and attestations seal'd by the Cazeer that nothing remain'd here belonging to them wee dispatch't them sending a Guard of 10 Soldiers commanded by an Officer to see them safe conveyed and deliver'd up to Meir Nassir.

March 5th.

March 7th.

"This morning the Soldiers return'd who went to see Seeterams servants and Family safe conducted and deliver'd up to Meir Nassir in Hugly. The Vacquell writes that Meir Nassir exprest the utmost satisfaction with his having received them."

March 8th.

Agreed that we send up with the Boats 300 Soldiers with good Officers and that our Garrison be not too much weak'ned so as to expose us to be plunder'd by the Stragglers in this Town that 50 Soldiers more be Listed in the Hon^{ble} Companys Service."

885.—LETTERS SENT TO THE DANES.

"Having received a Letter full of compliments from Lahaureemull, which he sent in the hands of Coja Sendell the Eunuch, who he refers to declare what he desires from us, and having discoursed him find he is ordered to request our endeavours to Perswade the Deanes to a Reconciliation and to propose Terms, We have therefore agreed on writing to the Danes Chief, the Letter is Coppyed after this Consultation which being interpreted to the Eunuch he approves off and desires us to send without any alteration we therefore resolve and agree it be sent in the hands of Mr. William Spencer and that he be ordered to desire an answer in writing."

December 17th.

"To MR. ATTRUP,

Chief for Affairs of the Royall Company of Denmark.

SIR,

I AM very sorry you are obliged to use violent means to defend your self from oppression, and shall think it a happyness If I may be a means to mediate a Peace that you may be securely settled, in your own Place again, without Interruption from any Body.

Some People in the Government at Hugly are come hither and desire me to endeavour a Reconciliation, proposeing to get it Ratified by Jaffur Caun which when performed you may rest satisfied no other Person among the Moors will presume to Violate it.

Mr. Feake, Mr. Deane, Mr. Frankland, and Captain Osborne wait on you to know your resolution please to propose to them what Terms you are Willing to treat on.

I am Sr.

Your very Humble Servant

ROBERT HEDGES."

"The Above Letter is what was wrote when the Ship lay near our Factory the next Letter Follows.

"To MR. ATTRUP,

Chief for Affairs of the Royall Company of Denmark.

SIR,

WHEN you were near this Place we offered you our endeavours to mediate a Peace not doubting but we might have obtained what terms you could reasonably propose for you and sufficient security that they should not be violated, We have since received a messenger from Jaffur caun the Duan at Muxodavad, desireing us once more to endeavour perswading you to a reconciliation 'tis acknowledged you have reason to suspect the people that deceived you severall times already by treacherous treatys, but 'tis to be hoped you do not suppose such baseness could be approved or encouraged by him who is the greatest man in Authority under the King in Bengall to Demonstrate that it was not, he will cause the agressors to give you full satisfaction for all the injuries they did you, and reimburse all the Charges you have been Forced to for your defence, his proposall and desire now is that you will remain in the River, two or three Months in expectation of the Kings Phirmaund which his Interest shall solicit for at Court and bring without putting you to any charges he will undertake the procureing it and if he fails will acknowledge what you have done deserves no blame and cannot justly be censur'd by any person living, We wish we may be the happy Instruments of your being resettled to your Satisfaction in Bengall.

We are Sir

Your Humble Servants

SS6.—THE ANSWER FROM THE DANES.

"Mr. Spencer being returned from the Danes Ship brings us a Letter in answer to what we wrote them.

December 21st.

"To the Hon^{ble} Governour Hedges &c^a. Councill.

"I received the Letter you were pleased to Send concerning the troubles, the Government has occasioned, and I assure you I did not desire it should come to this extremity, but desired of them Peace.

As to the Duans offering to deliver the Agressors and pay the charges, it is not to be trusted to, or believed, nor will it be to the Proffit of the Royall Company of Denmark, and I think it not safe to trust them who have proved themselves false so often.

If the Duan has a mind to make all things right, he must procure us the Phirmaund, he has been paid for fifteen years ago, also they must assure us we are not to have the Like usage hereafter.

At to what they have offered if they design a Peace they must now send it to Trincombar, where it will be considered by our Governour and Councill. Their weak proposall for us to stay here three Months gives great suspicion and looks as if they had a mind to deceive us once more, which I cannot trust, Therefore am resolved to deferr it to the Afforementioned, I wish you &c^a. Councill health and happyness.

I am Sirs

Your Humble Servant

ATTIRUP."

On the 3rd of January Captain Thomas Woodville had been

“I doe not agree that Leiu^t. Richard Hunt have the Company sett down in his name in this Consultation for of right itt should be given to Leiu^t. Edward Weltden who I esteem to be the most deserving man by much and against whom there could be no objection neither was any pretended when a humour prevailed with the late Governor Russell to give Mr. Hunt a Leiu^t. Commission before Mr. Weltden tho Hunt was much the inferiour or youngest officer for he was for some time no more then a Serjeant when Weltden had an Ensigns Comission and I must remark my consent was not asked about nameing the Company to be Hunts.”

March 11th. The English had for some time found it difficult to dispose of their woollen goods, owing to the fact that they wished to sell them all to one merchant, in order to keep up the price. Vārānasī Sett, the Company's broker, who had bought the goods last year, refuses to have them now, on the plea that he still has cloth remaining. Orders are therefore given to Mr. James Williamson, the Import warehouse-keeper, to find a 'Chapman' and to endeavour to sell him all or most of the woollen goods then in the warehouses at the following rates. "Aurora cloth at 109 rupees per piece, ordinary green at 75 rupees per piece."

921.—RESETTLEMENT OF THE CASSIMBAZAR FACTORY.

“The Hon^{ble} Company having Ordered us to send them a large quantity of Raw Silk We ought nott to deferr the consideration of how We may best comply with their Orders The settleing Cossimbuzar Factory is therefore proposed which itt seems necessary We do for the following Considerations.

May 23rd, 1715.

If the full quantity of Silk We are Ordered to provide could be bought here that woud not be a valid argument against settling Cossimbuzar Factory, for very good Silk is seldom to be mett with here the refuse rejected att Cossimbuzar being mostly what is brought hither for Sale.

If Cossimbuzar Factory had been settled last year (which our being in debt and want of money prevented) the Farmer of the Customs woud scarce have presumed to use our Merchants Gomastahs ill on a forged pretence that part of the goods provided by them and sent us on our Dustucks was for their own not our account. The Presence and good Conduct of an Experienced Chief might easily have prevented or found a remedy for such Pretences.

The Duans Sunnod conforming with the Kings command in his Husbullhookum putts us on better terms with the Government then We have been for many past years, or than any other Nation Yett is; but if We do not settle Cossimbuzar Factory We may almost be said to give up the advantage We have been long struggling for.

For which reasons itt is Unanimously Agreed that We send a Cheif and Councill to Cossimbuzar.

“Mr. Addams Second in Council whose right itt is to be Cheif at Cossimbuzar being proposed Declares He is fully resolved to return for England by one of the next Ships dispatched hence And requests that Mr. Samuell Feake, now third in Council here (to whom he gives up his right to that Station), may in his stead be appointed Cheif of Cossimbuzar, which Mr. Feake accepting of itt is Unanimously Agreed that Mr. Samuell Feake be appointed Cheif of Cossimbuzar Factory.”

“Mr. Waterworth Collett who after Mr. Addams his Departure will succeed to be of Council here, desireing on that account another may instead of him be sent second to Cossimbuzar Mr. Edward Crisp is Unanimously chosen to be Second there itt also agreed that Mr. Edward Ange now att Cossimbazar Who by his standing will commence Factor in July next be continued Third in Council at that Factory.”

942.—THE COLLOWAY CHITTY SEIZED BY A PORTUGUESE CAPTAIN.

“Senhr. Francisco frere de Aruja Commander in Cheife of a Portuguese Ship pretending an Order from the Vice Roy of Goa has seized in Sankerall Reach on the ship Colloway Chitty from Madras, whose Owners are the Hon^{ble} Edward

October 10th,

Harrison and other English Inhabitants of Fort St. George and he refuses to restore said Ship notwithstanding she had the Hon^{ble} Companys Pass our Pilott aboard her and the freindly demand wee make of Restitution and still persists in his obstinate refusall to restore the Ship.

Considering the perpetuall reproach it will be to our Nation if we suffer our ships to be taken plundered and carryed away by them in sight of the Moors who already dispise us for the patience we seem to have in bearing with the affront and Injury without useing force to doe ourselves right and may be encouraged by this Example to insult us themselves for they may reasonably suppose that if wee suffer the Portugueze who they have no regard for to plunder us We shall bear the like usage with the same patience from them We therefore resolve and Agree that we meet to Morrow in full Councill and Summons all the Commanders of the Hon^{ble} Companys Ships to sitt with us to consider what wee ought to doe and may lawfully be done in this case."

943.—THE PREVIOUS HISTORY OF THE COLLOWAY CHITTY.

"The Consultation of Yesterday having made Resolution of meeting this day We in conformity thereunto are mett to October 11th. consider what ought to and may lawfully be done for the recovery of our ship the Colloway Chitty from the Portugueze who in a hostile manner surprised and seized on her att an anchor in Sankerall Reach by order of Senhr. Francisco frere de Aruja the Supra Cargoe who calls himselfe Governour of the King of Portugalls Frigatt the Anna and Joseph.

The Colloway Chitty was originally a Portugueze Ship and Anno 1713 taken from them by Monsieur Boynot in the China Seas and carried to Manilla where she was condemned as lawful Prise and by authority of the Government there sold publickly. Alexo Pessoa, an Inhabitant of Madrass and Manuel Pereire Ramos an Inhabitant of Macao bought her in in partnership between them and they both proceeded in her to Macao the place she originally belonged to there one of her primitive owners Alexa Leite Pereira by name attached the Ship and commenced a Law Suit against Alexa Pessoa on pretence that He had appointed Alexa Pessoa his Attorney to redeem her for his Account but itt appeared to the Court there who heard and determined the cause that Francisco Leite Pereira did not qualifie Alexa Pessoa to act as Attorney for him for he did not furnish him with either money or Credit to redeem her The Court therefore decreed the Ship (att hat time her name was the Jesus Maria Joseph) to be the lawfull property of the persons who bought her at Manilla namely Alexo Pessoa and Manuel Pereira Ramos and that Francisco Leite Pereira had no right to claim any interest in her, The Ship being thus restored to the Defendants they proceeded on her to Batavia where Alexo Pessoa bought Manuell Pereira Ramos his part and so the Ship became the Sole property of Alexo Pessoa Who proceeded on her from Batavia to Suratt and thence to Madrass where being arrived Francisco Leite Pereira renewed his Claim but Alexo Pessoa bringing all the foregoing Circumstances the Judgment of the Portugueze Court att Macao was esteemed just and right and Alexo Pessoa's Title to the ship confirmed before this matter was determined at Fort St. George the Portugueze Frigatt Anna and Joseph arrived from Goa and a report was spread by Francisco Leite Pereira that she was ordered by the Vice Roy to seise Alexo Pessoa and his Ship, and carry her to Goa to try who she belonged to butt Senhr. Francisco freire de Aruja and the Commander in Cheif gave Alexo Pessoa a Certificate signed by them both that the report was frivolous and false which removed all apprehensions of future Imbroils about the ship and encouraged the sale of her att Fort St. George where she was bought for account of the Hon^{ble} Govern^r. Harrison and other English Gentlemen."

944.—THE SEIZURE DECLARED AN ACT OF PIRACY.

"The seventh Paragraph of a Letter from the Governour and Council att Fort St. George dated the 29th August relate-October 11th. ing to this affaire was now produced and read also Francisco freire de Aruja his Letter dated the 18th October N. S.
being an answer to the Presidents and Councils demand of restitution of the Ship Collouay Chitty and severall Authentick copys of papers by which Alexo Pessoa's right to the Ship was clearly proved all which being naturely considered off. The Portugueze sending forty men armed with fire armes Swords and Granadoes into Sankerall Reach to seise the Ship, where they actually surprised and seised on her as She lay att anchor and doe still keep possession of her It is the opinion of every single person of us that soe doing is an Act of Piracy and contrary to the laws of Nations."

945.—ENGLISH PRESTIGE MUST BE VINDICATED.

The next consideration was concerning the damage likely to accrue to the Hon^{ble}. Comp^{as}. Affairs and to our Nation October 11th. in Generall and the everlasting reproach our submitting tamely to such Insults would bring on us especially in the Mogulls Dominions whose Subjects near us begin already to upbraid us with Cowardise saying wee who used to defend our selves better are become tame like old women and suffer our selves to be plundered within our own jurisdiction The merchants say if we continue thus passive no Man henceforth will think itt safe to freight his goods aboard any English Ship, and people in the Government att Hugly begin already to insult us and have sent severall Chowkee boates to ply up and down before our Town which wee never admitted of and shall nott now tho they are pleased to say of us in derision they see wee may be easilie baffled since so despicable a People as the Portugueze insult and plunder us and wee submitt to itt and in truth if they find wee sitt still without using the means proper to doe our selves right we may depend on being used very ill by the Duan Jaffer Caun and by all Inferior and petty Officers in Bengall. All which being considered of it is the unanimous opinion of us all that if wee cannot prevaile to have the ship peacably restored to us: it is become absolutely necessary that wee endeavour to retake her by force of armes which wee think and hope may easilie be done in Sankerall Reach where she yett remains att anchor.

946.—THE PORTUGUESE PRISONERS SENT TO GOA.

“ Being mett to consider how We ought to dispose of the Portugueze

October 24th.

Prisoners taken in the attempt to carry away the Colloway Chitty It is the unanimous opinion of us that they be delivered into the Custody of Senhor Bartholomew de Albuguerque and Captain Demare Guere aboard the Portugueze Frigatt and he desired to deliver them in Goa that their Crime may be tryed and judged of as the Vice Roy shall direct Our reasons for so doing are, because We would give him no cause to suspect wee had any design prejudiciall to his Majesty The King of Portugall or that we had any other Intention then to protect our own Ship. The Colloway Chitty which his People had no right to seise on: This mild way of management does also demonstrate that We had no Intention to Affront the Vice Roy for if He does Nott think them Criminalls He has it in his power to acquitt them.

permission to coin money in the Mint at Muxadavad Custome free, they advise that he has given Orders for our business to go on without Molestation that the Peons he had put upon our Merchants were taken off, These proceedings had so good effect with our Merchants that severall had brought Silk into the Factory and more daily was coming in, They desire we woud send them some treasure and the Pucka lead that is the silver lead and two of our young men to be assisting in their business, They also desire to have liberty that a house may be bought or built near the Mint without which they cannot go on with their business in the Mint. Agreed That Boates be got ready and two Chests of French Crowns Nine Chests of Lyon Dollars, three Chests of German Dollars, That Charles Hampton and Phillip Michell get ready to go up with the said Treasure to Cossimbuzar, that we write to Mr. Feake etc. to hire a House if possible near the Mint for this Season, so that in case our business should not go on, We may nott have a House lye on our hands.

949.—THE REPORT OF THE COMMITTEE UPON RAMBUDDER.

“Upon examination of Rambudder We find he had made use of November 10th. the Hon^{ble} Companys Revenue moneys to the amount of Rupees 1,458 for about this two years

964.—SURMAN PRESENTS A SECOND PETITION TO FURRUHCSIYAR.

“Last night we received a Packett from Dilly dated Febr^y 7th March 14th. Incloseing papers.”

“Mr. Surman etc. in their Letters advise us; that not haveing received full answers to the Generall Petition they Presented his Majesty they had drawn up a Second Petition which had been delivered in some days, but as yet had received no answer, they advise us they had been Examining the Books Concerning the Entry of Customs for the English Trade at Surratt, and that they found it much Encreased by the Addition of Private Trade, and that the reasons of the Great Abuses Committed on the English at Surratt, has been Chiefly Occasioned by the many Buyers and Sellers of Englishmen there, so that for these many Years there has been a difference made in paying Custom from the Company and other English Traders, as at Present the Companys Custom is but 2½ Per Cent., whereas all other English Traders pay 3½ Per Cent., for which reason they humbly Presume that Should they get the Customs turned into a Yearly Pishcash, there would be an Absolute necessity to lay aside any Supra-Cargoes, going to that Port, with a full Power to dispose of any Goods Seeing this Priviledge will Entirely devolve on the Company so the Goods ought to go in their Warehouse, and be disposed of by their Servants, which will hinder any future Impositions or Differences; Giveing likewise an Opportunity for the Company to lay any duty on those goods which may Contribute to the Payment of the Yearly Pishcash for that trade; they advise us that the Madras Rupee not being of the same fineness with those of Surratt it would be for the Comp^{as} interest to have them of Equall weight and goodness with those of Surratt."

1055.—BUYING THE OCTAGON NEAR SUTANUTI.

“The Octogon built on a point of Land near Chuttanuttee from November 14th. which the River bends towards Hugly and this Place by which Scituation it overlooks the River

up and down a great way, for which reasons the Collector of Hugly Customes has severall Times attempted to get it into his hands in Order to fix a Choukey There which would greatly incommode all the Affaires both Publick and Private at this Place Therefore to prevent it falling at any Time into his hands as It had like once to have done That We buy it for the Hon^{ble} Companys Use the Price Agreed on being four hundred Madras Rupees Which is much less then the Octogon (which is Strong and well built) cost the building of besides with the Ground belonging to it is nearly worth that money.”

1056.—PROPOSED REGULATIONS FOR PRIVATE TRADE.

“The President believing the following Regulations Highly neces-November 14th. sary Proposes them for Confirmation, and if they do not pass into Orders of Councill, insists on their being Coppied after this Consultation that the Hon^{ble} Court of Directors may see and Judge of them.

“Because Irregular Proceedings in the Management of that part of our Private Affaires which Relates to Freight, must Necessarily Occasion Such disorders as will unavoidably be of Pernicious Consequence to our • Hon^{ble} Masters Affaires in the Article of Freight, when we have Ships of theirs on our hands to be employed on Freight Voyages as well as to all of us who are or shall be concerned in Ships designed for Surat or Persia. It is Highly necessary, we declare and Order how our Freight business is to be managed, for else some or other of us may through inadvertency and want of due Consideration in such Cases, Happen to be biassed by a Seeming Prospect of a little immediate Gain, to aim at a Clandestine Management in opposition to the Generall Interest which woud be of worse consequence to that trade in Generall then perhaps Some men may be aware of. Tis therefore Agreed and Orderd that—“Those among us who are or shall be Concerned in Ships for Surat or Persia, do meet Yearly before any Ship is sett up for those Ports, And as often after as shall seem necessary, And agree on what Ships shall be set up for those Ports, after the best Inquiry possible is made of what freight goods are likely to offer or be procurable that Season.

“After we have determind what Ships are to be sett up for Surat or Persia, no other Ship is to be sett up that Season upon a Freight Voyage for those Ports by any Person of us, or under the Companys Protection in Bengal except it be first Agreed on by a Generall Consent of those among us concerned in Shipping. Butt all are at Liberty to send Ships or other Vessells with their Cargoes of what they think proper, except Freight Goods, to either of those Ports or where else they please.

“If a Ship from some other Port happens to come Consigned to any of us, expecting freight for Surat or Persia, after we have declared what Ships are Sett up for those Voyages, She must be content with the Gleanings after the others are full. The Reason of which is, that the Rate of Freight may not be beat down by underhand Practices as it must of necessity be if Seperate Interests are Sett up.

“Tis a fix'd Rule never to be Swerved from that when we have a Ship, or Ships, of the Hon^{ble} Companys to be imployed on Freight Voyages for either or both those Ports, no private Ship under our direction, or Protection Designed to a Port a Ship of the Companys is sett up for shall have a Freight Bale till the Companys Ship is provided for.

“That the gentlemen at Madrass or Bombay may have no Cause to suspect we design to exclude them from an equitable Share of the Benefitt by Freight We declare they may, as long as they Please, Hold the Parts they have already in our Ships, And in such as the Gentlemen of Madras has not already full one third part and of Bombay one fourth part, they or their Attorneys for them may if they think fitt increase their Subscriptions to those Proportions.

"Because the Ladeing of Ships belonging to us or any others under our protection at the Danes Factory or anywhere else up the River beyond our Bounds, may besides other evill Consequences (either designedly or through inadvertency) give oppertunitys for misapplying our Dustucks, which would be greatly to the Prejudice of Our Hon^{ble} Masters Affaires, And is directly Contrary to their Orders. Tis necessary we take such Measures as will effectually prevent our Dustucks being that way misapplied.

"Ordered therefore that no Ship in English Service, be Laden or have Freight Goods putt aboard her at any Place up the River out of our bounds, between this and Hugly.

"And to prevent Just Complaints and remove the unjust, too frequently made by the Hugly Government of our abusing the favour we have long enjoyed and is Confirmed to us by King Furruckseer, of trading Custome free.

"Ordered that no goods whatsoever be landed out of the Boats, of Laden aboard any Ship at this Place, before the President for the time being, or in case he be sick, or absent upon any occasion, the next after him in Councill who happens to be present knows what Account they are for, And the Export warehouse keeper, whose proper business it is, has examined the Dusticks and Rowannas, who after Examination if he finds no fallacy in the case is to permitt and order their being Landed or disposed of without delay according to the Intent of the Dustick or Rowanna.

"If the Curiosity of any other Person in Councill inclines him when he has Leisure to assist the Export Warehouse keeper in that Examination he may, But the Warehouse keeper must not wait the Leisure of any Man, because Delays in Such an Affair may Happen to be prejudicial to one, or other, Contrary to the Design or Intent of this Order."

1057.- OBJECTIONS TO THE PROPOSED REGULATIONS.

After this consultation the following note appears—

November 14th. "We assent to every Order in the above Consultation except the uncommon Entry after it the Hon^{ble} President has made of a Paper of Regulations he proposes for private Trade for no paper ought to be Registred in this Book without an Order of Council. At the time it was laid before the board We Who were the Majority desired till next meeting to consider of it (but two days) and that we might have a Coppy but notwithstanding the President promised us one he forbid the Sect.^{ry} even so much as permitting one of our Assistants to take it his Reasons We are unacquainted with however He having Signed it We have given in an answer which is entred after Consultation of the 12th December 1717.

1066.—DETAILED OBJECTIONS TO THE PROPOSED REGULATIONS FOR PRIVATE TRADE.

"The President having in Consultation of the 14th November last Thursday, December delivered into Councill some Regulations proposed 12th. for the Management of Private Trade which We not thinking agreeable to the Companys Orders do make the following Reply:—

To the 1st Par.—The Honourable Company our Masters are pleased to Indulge their Covenant Servants and such Persons as are Licensed by them to reside in India with a Liberty to Trade without Restraint, provided it does not in any wise interfere or prejudice their Affairs and We cannot see that having the Trade free and open to Surat or Persia can be of any pernicious Consequences to them or their Affairs in the Article of Freight, since it is a Standing Order not to be broke through that when one of their Ships is set up for any Freight Voyage, She must have the Preference in all Respects before any other Ships can agree for a Bale, and in case any Clandestine proceedings are made contrary thereto the Company have given full Instructions how they are to be dealt with who are the Aggressors therefore we cannot see any reason for such fear, seeing no one is ignorant of the Penalty; but after She is full freighted We cannot see any Damage can accrue to our Honourable Masters by seting up a Ship, or that it can be termed Clandestine or in opposition to the Generall Interest without the Interest of one or two among us be termed so; and that most of us are and still are designed to be excluded is evident by the Second Article wherein the Governour proposes the Agreeing on what Ships of all Ports shall be sent on Freight Voyages without providing that Wee who are not already concerned shall be interested in them, which some of us on Request have been already denied.

To the 2nd Par.—Wee cannot but think what the Honourable Company have at severall times written about Private Trade and the Limitations thereof must have slipt the Honourable Presidents Memory or else he would not pretend to Confine Madrass or the Companys other Settlements to any Regulations Wee shall make seeing they order (to use their own words) they shall trade with All Freedom at Fort William equal with our Selves, and shall be allowed to Trade at Hugly with the same Freedom as any of us do and that wee (meaning the President and Council) give them Dusticks.

To the 3rd, 4th & 5th Pars.—And seeing the Honourable Company has granted a free Liberty to Trade to Bengall and Orderd our Assistance thereto, wee cannot think but if a Ship should come consigned to any one among us, Wee have the Priviledge to provide for her equally one with the other which Wee declare for our Selves shall never be done so as to prejudice the Company for wee will not agree for one Frieght bale till the Companys Ship (if any be set up for that Place) be full Laden and Wee further declare it as our Opinion that no Ship be set up for such Voyage till a full Freight for that Ship be secured which will Assuredly prevent the Lowering of Freight This will give every one of us his Share in the Companys Indulgence which is now ingrossed by a few.

To the 6th Par.—The Honourable Companys giving Liberty to Trade at Hugly is enough to authorize the Lading a Ship at the Danes Town and no one is ignorant of the ill Consequence of misapplying the Companys Dusticks and since no Instance of such Villany has been wee cannot see any Reason of Suspicion; but this Article and Some others are only specious Pretences, since our Governour declared this Dispute had not Happened if Freight enough had offered for all the Ships which must be for Surat, for none Wee have, are designed for Persia where the Bouverie is Bound so that it is not any Concern for our Honourable Masters but private Interest is the Occasion of this Dispute.

To the 7th Par.—Wee Agree that all Dusticks and Rowannas for Goods Landed at this Place or Laden on board any Ship be examined according to Custome and must urge another Custome which has never been denied viz. That any one among Us may have Goods directly brought to his Gaul and after showing his Dustick as usual landed at his own House or Warehouse without Molestation or being stopped at Chuttanuttee Point, where the Governour without the Advice or Consent of his Council has planted Soldiers to Stop all Boats Laden with bales, Ophium, or Sugar which wee declare is contrary to our Opinions and what wee think may be prejudicial to the Honourable Companys Affaires. For As his Imperial Majesty King Furruckseer has been pleased to grant us several Favours besides his Royall Phirmaun which putts the Honourable Company on a better foundation of carrying on their Trade than ever so wee ought to take perticular Care that nothing may be transacted that may give Occasion to the Government to complain of his misusing his Favours, especially since wee find by a Letter received from Cojah Surhaud that Jaffer caun has written to Court against us. Now the seting up this choukee¹ at Chuttanuttee Point to Stop all Boats going up or down the River being an unusual thing, and what his Imperiall Majesty has strictly forbidden to be done, Wee are of opinion and do Agree that no Chowkee be suffered in the Companys Bounds to impede or hinder the free Passage of boats up or down the River. Wee cannot see any Advantage this Chowkee can be, but are sure it may be attended with evill Consequences, as lately if any Accident had happened to the two boats laden for a Moors Ship on the other side of the water which was stopt a Considerable Time by them,

Dated in Fort William in Bengall the 25th November 1717."

1067.—THE ANSWER TO THESE OBJECTIONS.

"The Proposals delivered by the President in Consultation the 14th of last November for Prevention of irregular December 17th. Proceeding in the Management of that Part of our Private Trade which relates to Freight, clashing with Some of Mr. Franklands Projects his Dissent is not to be wondred at And what the Powerfull Motive is, which influences some Others to Unite with him, will appear in a Clearer Light than the party he Leads would Probably have it. •

The Freedom of Trade indulged by our Honourable Masters to their Servants as well as other Persons who they indulge to reside in India is neither disputed nor designed to be. But can any Man suppose the Honourable Company design their Indulgence shall be extended to their own Prejudice. If not, it follows of Course that as many of us as see how it may be so extended and do not endeavour to prevent the Evill, may justly be esteemed unworthy Servants which surely none of us are willing to be thought, 'tis therefore to be hoped every man will forsake his Error as he becomes convinced of his being in one. Any Man May be mistaken in his Judgement, and 'tis no Shame to recant an Error a man is convinced off, but there must be a great defect of one kind or other where an Error is stood stiff in after Conviction.

We are glad to find 'tis become Unanimously Agreed to make it a Standing Order never to be broken through that when any of the Companys Ships are Sett up for Freight Voyages, they are to be fully provided for before other Ships bound to the same Ports with them are to have one Freight bale. This is a good Point gained for the Honourable Companys Service. Next after them wee think it reasonable and believe our Honourable Masters will judge it so, that wee provide for our Selves and fellow Servants by securing what Freight bales shall remain as a Perquisite for them, and us. Does not Our Toil and Labour to serve the Honourable Company deserve some Encouragement superiour to what They allow Persons not in their Service. Wee hope it does, And believe that one article, the Care taken to secure Good Freights for their Ships when any remain on our hands to be imployed on Freight Voyages, deserves something, And (supposing this Article agreed on) what can be more reasonable than the division wee proposed; of one Third for Madrass Presidency one fourth part for Bombay Presidency and the rest for Bengall of all our Ships imployed on Freight Voyages for Surat or Persia which supposing each divided into twelve equall Shares is three for Bombay four for Madrass and five for Bengall, Wee see no reason to object against those proportions except it be disputed in favour of Bombay that each Presidency should have one third part which does not seem reasonable because both Madrass and Bombay have several other beneficial Trades, which wee are not and cannot well be concerned in.

Wee are sorry if any man is in earnest so blind as not to perceive the Damage that may accrue to our Honourable Masters in the Article of Freight by private Ships when more are known to be designed for Freight Voyages than sufficient to Carry all the Freight Goods, whose is the fault if any of us do not know that the plenty or Scarcity of Shipping does, and no other accident can raise or lower the rate of Freight.

If when a Ship of the Companys is sett up for a Freight Voyage There are more others designed on the same Voyage than Sufficient to carry all the Freight Goods expected that Season The rate for Freight will fall of Course if private Interest prompts any man to promise they shall be carried cheaper on another Ship, which is likely to happen notwithstanding Agreements and Promises to the Contrary: for Promises are just as binding when the Companys Interest is apparently at Stake as when 'tis disputed whither it be or not, wee therefore still believe it to be the Generall Interest both of the Honourable Company and of our Selves, that a sufficient number of private Ships and no more, be appointed for the Surat and Persia Trade, of which two may be otherwise employed and many cannot with a reasonable Prospect of moderate gain when a Ship or two of the Companys remain on our hands to be employed on Freight Voyages.

The Objectors are pleased to write they cannot see any Damage can accrue to our Honourable Masters by setting up a Ship or that it can be termed Clandestine in opposition to the generall Interest without the Interest of one or two among us be termed so. It may be supposed they mean one or both of us by that Reflection because it may be thought improbable that any of them designed to reflect on themselves, Nevertheless because 'tis unjust on us who divide our Risque and dont. adventure great Sums in one bottom, 'tis possible Mr. Frankland may (tho' he did not suspect it) be the Person aimed at. But whether he be or not is no concern to us, we do not reflect or find fault with his adventuring boldly he and any man may adventure his own money how he pleases without opposition from us, we are not for limittig him or any man who has money in a fair trade, But Clandestine management such as will prejudice the Companys Affairs and the generall Interest of all their Servants we must be against. If the buying a Ship privately at Hugly, and setting her up for a Surat freight Voyage after an Engagement and Promise which the Doing so cannot (without the help of quibling) be reconciled with And the part Loading her at the French Factory in Hugly and pretending She was not there but (some Reaches down the River) at the Danes Factory, be not Clandestine management wee know not what is. 'Tis so apparently such, that the reasons for the Care wee propose to prevent the like when a Ship of the Companys is sett up for Surat are greatly Strengthened by it. The Sha Allum is an Instance of our Sincerity, She was put by the Persia Voyage that the Bouverie may have a full Freight and wee did not declare her for Surat because wee did not think it fair to break through the agreement made before her arrivall for other Ships. But it happened that Scruple did not stiek with the Objectors.

The Assertion is not true that any Person was excluded or designed to be excluded by us from a Share in every Ship employed in the Surat or Persia freight trades who had money or Credit to advance for a Share. But want of both may possibly have excluded Some till they found the art of forcing a Credit from the Merchants which a late Order of the Court of Directors expressly forbids under the penalty of discharging those who continue in the Practice of it, And are of Council, from the Companys Service. The Court of Directors remarks on this Occasion that the borrower will ever be Servant to the Lender is very just Consequently if the Report be true that Mr. Frankland has rivitted a party to his Interest by becoming Security for the Debts a Majority of them owe, to Screen them from the dangerous Clamours of their Creditors his easily Leading them right or wrong any way he inclines is not to be wondred at.

The Article quoted of the Presidents Proposals cannot bear the wrested Construction the Objectors putt on it They nor any of them are designed by it to be excluded and none of them that wee know of has been denied who desired to Subscribe before the Subscriptions were full, and had money to pay for their Parts. But Wee confess wee do not understand the Trade of lending our money to be adventured by Sea for the Profit of other People, at our risque, interest free and without Security, or a Prospect that it Will be repaid in case of a Loss.

Little need be said in reply to the Objectors Second Paragraph, because the Limitation proposed by the President or something very like it was aimed at, And supposed to be for the Generall Interest by the Governour and Council of Fort St. George when they sent Mr. Boone (the same Gentleman who is now President of Bombay) with authority to agree and settle that affair with the then Governour and Council of Bengall. And 'tis probable they may now as they did then believe it for the General Interest. Let all this Dispute as it Stands in writing be fairly sent them, and leave those Gentlemen to judge for themselves.

So much has been already said on the Subject of the Objectors third Paragraph that a great deal perticularly in Reply to it need not be added more than since they affirm the Companys Indulgence is Ingrossed by a few, Lett all the Subscription Papers for some past Years as well as the present be Copied and sent to the Court of Directors, that they may Judge how far 'tis Truth and who are the Ingrossers. And to put the whole matter in a Clear light, let every man distinguish what part of his Subscriptions have been for other People when the whole was not for his own Account. This is proposed that no man who holds a part in anothers Name may pretend he is excluded.

The Objectors endeavouring to Justifie their Lading a Ship at the Danes Factory, argues they are not yet willing to confess the Truth. It was not there but at the French Factory where four of themselves saw her the 19th November as they past by in the Presidents Company upon Occasion of receiving the Phirmaun etc. at Tribanny. The Presidents Reply when They started the question (what if more Freight bales had offered than all the Ships in the river could carry) was, there could in that case have been no room for disputes, And does not argue that any single Article in his Proposals is grounded on Specious Pretences, we are not willing to under value the Objectors Judgement so much as to believe they in earnest think it does.

The Octogon on Chuttanuttee Point is the most proper place of any within our bounds above us, to keep an out Guard at, for thence all boates passing up and down may be seen a great way. The President has therefore placed a Guard there, Honestly designing it to be a fence against the Abuse of our Dustucks, The perticular Regard the Court of Directors injoyn him to have of their Interest Authorizes his doing it And none have just cause to find fault with its being done who have not some indirect end or other to serve. The pretence that 'tis forbid by King Furruckseer is frivolous, for the design of it is not to abuse boats, or extort a Duty, or put them to Charges, or Delay them a Moment, But to inquire what they are and whether bound the doing which may sometimes happen to Prevent the Kings being defrauded of his Customes, And this Account will not only silence but abundantly please the Hugly Government if they ask questions concerning it, which hitherto they have not done.

It has been a Rule from the beginning at this Place that Dusticks or Rowanna's for Goods brought hither shoud be first brought to the President who always did or should send them to the Export Warehouse keeper for he is the proper Officer to enquire what Account they are for, and prevent Goods designed for the Companys Warehouse being sold to private Persons. And if he discovers no fallacy he passes them without delay to be disposed of as the Dustuck or Rowanna directs. Nothing is proposed contrary to this, Consequently no Innovation is designed."

FORT WILLIAM,

JOHN WILL'AMSON.

1063.—FURTHER OBSERVATIONS BY THE OBJECTORS.

“To prevent the mispending time that may cause a Neglect in the more immediate business of the Honourable Company which at this time of Year requires Dispatch

December 17th.

wee choose rather to defer giving a Reply to the above Paper given in by the President etc. that our Honourable Masters Interest may not suffer by disputing our private but thus far we declare notwithstanding what they have alledged to the contrary the Choukee at Chuttanuttee Point may be attended with pernicious Consequences therefore the Continuation of it is against our opinions, and wee do insist on the breaking it up but in case the President is Resolved to continue the same we require the Charges thereof may be kept apart till the Honourable Company further Order whether they are willing to be at the extraordinary Expence and wee hereby clear our Selves from any damage that may accrue to our Honourable Masters by disgusting the Government or affronting the French or Dutch by stopping boats and other Irregularities.”

BIOGRAPHICAL AND OTHER ILLUSTRATIVE ADDENDA.

L.—THE FAMILY AND HISTORY OF ANTHONY WELTDEN.

THE Weltden family claims to be descended from Bertram de Waltden or Weltden in Northumberland who flourished A. D. 1027 in the time of William the Conqueror. In a manuscript "Copie of the visitation of Kent, May, 1619," by Hasted (British Museum Add. MS. 16279) the genealogy of the family is given without break up to 1685. From this it appears that in the sixteenth century the family split into five branches. Simon Weltden, of Welton, Northumberland, by his marriage with Elizabeth Denton, had two sons; Christopher Weltden, of Welton, from whom descends the Northumberland branch of the family, and Hugh Weltden, who was Sewer to Henry VII. This Hugh Weltden had four sons; first Hugh, from whom descends the Shottesbrook (Berkshire) branch of the family; secondly Edward, from whom descends the Swanscombe (Kentish) branch; thirdly Thomas, from whom descends the Cookham (Berkshire) branch; and fourthly William, from whom descends the Thornby, or Thurnby (Northamptonshire), branch of the Weltden family. Of these the Swanscombe and the Thornby branches are connected with India.

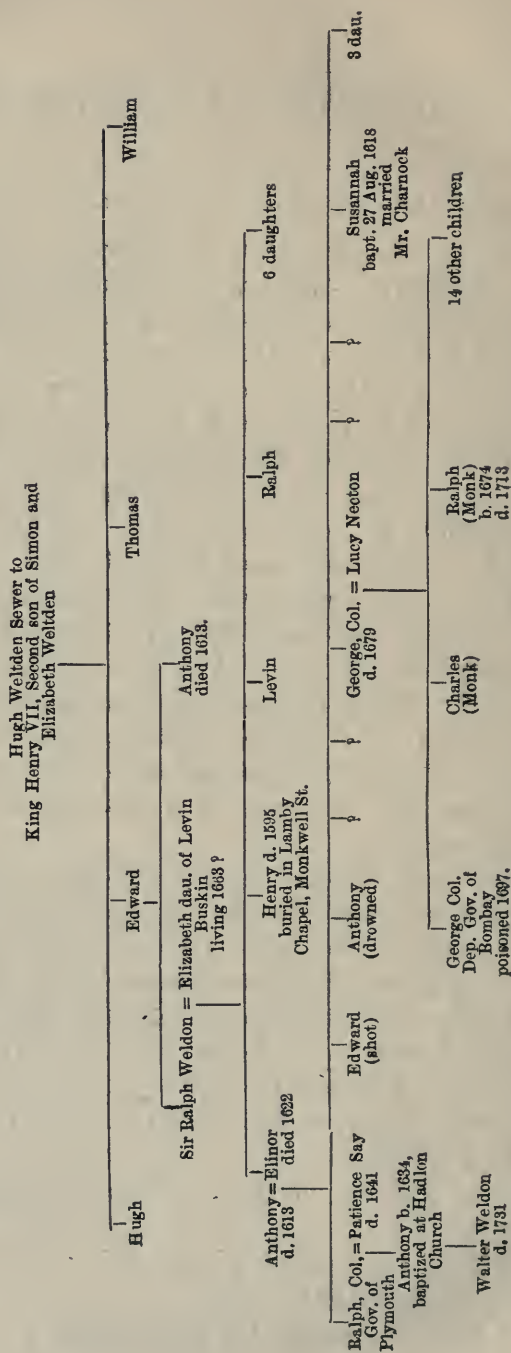

The family name is often written Welton and Weldon, the latter being the form always used by the Swanscombe branch; but the original form seems to have been Weltden. Wallis in his Natural History and Antiquities of Northumberland tells us that "Welton Tower (a corruption of Wall-Town) is the seat of the ancient family of Weltons;" and Lewis, in his Topographical Dictionary of England, under the heading "Welton in the parish of Ovingham, Northumberland," says "the Tower, the manorial seat of the ancient family of Welton, is fast going to decay."

The armorial bearings of the Weltdens according to Burke and Hasted are as follows:—

Arms. Argent, a cinquefoil pierced gules; on a chief of the second a demi-lion issuant of the first.

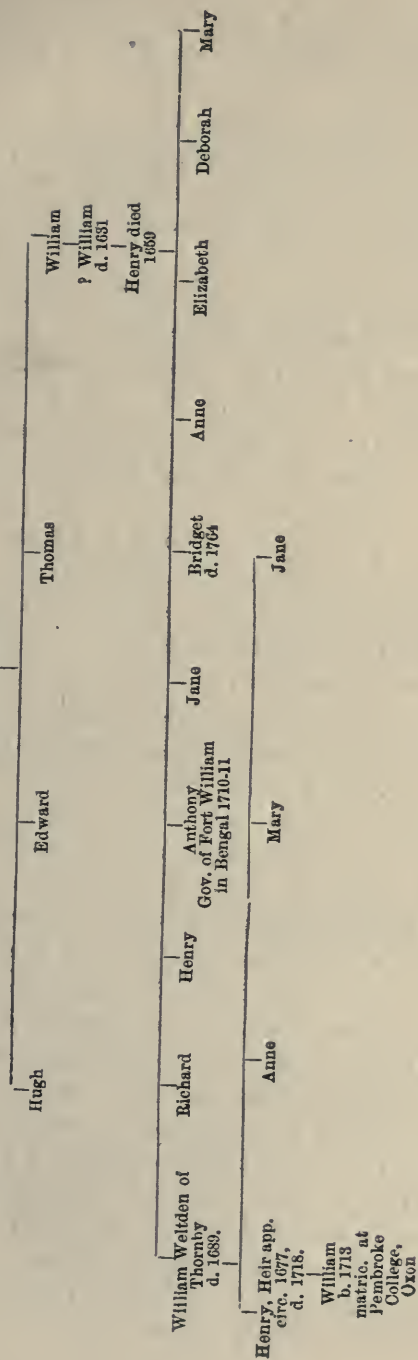

Crest. A demi-lion rampant arg. gutté-de-sang.

SWANSCOMBE (KENTISH) BRANCH OF THE WELTDEN FAMILY.

THORNBY OR THURNBY (NORTHAMPTONSHIRE) BRANCH OF THE WELTDEN FAMILY.

Hugh Weltlden 2nd Son of Simon
& Elizabeth Weltlden
Sewer to Henry VII.

An interesting account of some of the Swanscombe Weldons is found in the preface to a book by Benedict Ralph Weldon called English Benedictine Congregation, Chronological Notes, by Dom Bennet Weldon.

Benedict Ralph Weldon became a professed monk in January, 1692, and wrote his book in Paris, the date of the preface being May, 1709.

The monk was grandson of Sir Anthony Weldon of Swanscombe, clerk of the kitchen to King James I. Sir Anthony had eight sons and four daughters.

The eldest son, Ralph, was a Colonel and Governor of Plymouth. He was a roundhead and relieved Taunton.

The second son, Edward, was shot as he entered a place he had taken for the Grand Duke of Tuscany.

The third son, Anthony, was famous in the war of the Low Countries, spent three fair estates, and perished at sea in a great expedition for the Grand Duke of Tuscany.

The sixth son, George, was a Colonel, and father of the author. He remained loyal to the king, was banished for seven years, had a great hand in the Restoration, but died unrewarded in March 1679. His wife's name was Lucy Neeton of Norfolk. He lost his fortune in trying to retrieve his position. Of his seventeen children, only three sons lived to grow up, and there were seven years between each of them. The eldest son was Col. George Weldon, Deputy Governor of Bombay. The second was Charles, a monk. The third, Ralph, the author, also a monk. *One daughter Susannah, married Mr. Charnock.*¹

The mother died April 26, 1702, and was buried in Aldgate Church. Rumours of foul play with regard to his eldest brother made the author come to London to try to recover Col. George Weldon's fortune for his mother and sisters. Mrs. George Weldon was poisoned, and died on her way home from Bombay 25th April, 1697. Her husband, Col. George Weldon, was induced to go on shore at Mauritius to solace his grief, ate 'the best part of two pullets' and salad, was seized with violent pains, died on 2nd July 1697 in great torment, and was buried on the island. Some say, the author adds, that the poison did not work quickly enough, and that the murderers stifled their victim in order not to lose a favourable wind. Dom Bennet's efforts to bring the murderers to justice were fruitless. He himself died Nov. 23rd, 1713, in his fortieth year.

¹Perhaps, these were the parents of Job Charnock. I have not yet found any other record of the marriage. The Swanscombe parish registers show that Susanna was baptised, 27th August, 1618.

Of the Thornby Weltdens there is no similar detailed account.

Of William Weltden of Thornby, who died on the 25th December, 1631, the will is extant in the probate registry of Northampton.

His son Henry died on the 3rd July, 1659, and was buried on the following day, as appears by an entry in the parish registers of Thornby. But he does not seem to have left any will.

His son, William, matriculated at Wadham College, Oxford, 10th March, 1656-57, and was admitted as a student of the Inner Temple on the 28th November, 1660. He died on the 28th March, 1689, but apparently left no will. The youngest brother of this William Weltden, and fourth son of Henry Weltden, was Anthony, who, as appears from his will, is to be identified with the Governor of Calcutta in 1710-11.

William Weltden was succeeded by his son and heir, Henry, who died intestate on the 16th April, 1718, aged 41. His son William matriculated at Pembroke College, Oxford, on the 26th March, 1729, being then aged 16.

In Thornby Church, within the rails of the altar, on a stone raised against the wall, is the following inscription:—

Serenissimis Jacobo & Corolo regibus in ducatu Lancast. Servus & Auditor fss Gulielmus Weltden Arm. a Bertamo de Waltden in Northumbria, qui floruit A° Dni 1077, seriatim productus obiit 25° die Decemb. A° Dni 1631.

Upon common gravestones on the ground in the church we find:—

“Hic jacet supra dic. Gul. Weltden Arm. qui obiit 25° die Decemb. A° Dni 1631—Et Henricus Weltden Gen. praedicti Gul. filius, qui obiit 3° die Julii A° Dni 1659—Et Gul. Weltden Gen. Henr. praedicti filius qui obiit 28° Die Martii A° Dni 1689—Etiamque Henricus Weltden Gen. Gul. praedicti filius qui Obiit 16 die Aprilis Anno Dom 1718

Governor Anthony Weltden.

Anthony Weltden, Governor of Fort William in Bengal, 1710-11, as appears from his will, belonged to the Thornby branch of the family, and was, almost certainly, the fourth son of that Henry Weltden of Thornby who died in 1659.¹ As the youngest son he had to seek his fortune abroad and must have gone to sea at an early age.

He first appears in the records of the East India Company, when still a young man, as the captain of the Curtana at Madras in 1687. At this time the English already at war with the Mogul government had determined to break with the King of Siam and demand compensation for alleged damages. The Madras government being eager to commence hostilities sent the Curtana and the James to Mergui to settle their differences with the Siamese government. The command of the expedition was given to Captain Anthony Weltden, who was entrusted with the following documents to be delivered by him on his arrival at Mergui.

1. A letter recalling the English in Siam.
2. A letter to Constant Phaulkon, the Vizier, demanding satisfaction for damages done to the Company and its Servants, amounting to £65,000.
3. A letter to the King of Siam threatening to take ships and goods 'by way of reprisall' if compensation be not made in 60 days.
4. A letter to the Raja, Governor of Tenasserim, repeating what was written to the king.

The proceedings of Anthony Weltden at Mergui seem to have been highly injudicious, and provoked a sudden insurrection of the natives who massacred all the English in the place and seized the James. Weltden, however, on his ship the Curtana, and White, the Siamese port officer, on his ship the Resolution, managed to escape. From Mergui Weltden sailed to Cape Negrais, where he hoisted the English flag, and thence to the Nicobar Islands. At Acheen he rejoined White, and sailed with him Madapallan, where he left White and arrived at Madras on Christmas day, 1687.

The story of the Mergui expedition is given in detail in Anderson's English Intercourse with Siam. The polemics of the subject are found in (1) The Answer of the East India Company, to Two Printed Papers of Mr. Samuel White, One Entituled 'His Case'; The other, 'A True Accompt. of the Passages at Mergen' and (2) in Francis Davenport's Historical Abstract of Mr. Samuel White, his Management of Affairs, in his Shabander Ship of Tenassery and Mergen, during Francis Davenport's stay with him in Inality of Secretary.

The following passages occur in the Company's records which bear on Weltden's proceedings at this time.

In the Madras Public Consultations Vol. XII, page 40, the arrival of the Curtana at Fort St. George from England is recorded on the 24th March 1687.¹

"Ship Curtana Capt. Anthony Weltden Commander arrived here this evening from England and on her, Mr. William Hatsill Mr. . . Farwell and Mr. . . Sherrar free Merchants. . . .

¹ I am indebted to the kindness of Mr. A. T. Pringle for the extracts from the Madras Public Consultations.

Att a Consultation Extrao.

The Curtana Capt^t Anthony Weltden Commander coming in here and the Commander coming ashore this morning, to know if we had any service for Bengall, & understanding by him that he had on board Letters from the R^t Hon^{ble} Comp^a to the Agent and Councill in Bengall as well as 23 Soldiers &c^a for said place, & being thought very convenient for the R^t Hon^{ble} Comp^{as} affaires that we should have a sight of their Hon^{rs} Letters (the Ship coming from Portsmouth in June last) Itt is order'd that the Secretary do give the Commander an order to bring them ashore, as also the Souldiers (to remain here) having great occation for them at this place, as by the report of one Councill of Officers, which we have already advised the R^t Hon^{ble} Comp^a of, in giving them an acct^o of our condition."

On 'Munday' the 28th March, the following entry occurs in the Consultations Book:—

"Mr. Willcox &c^a att Conimeer having advised us in their Generall of the 26th Ins^t rec^d this morning, that there is a ship belonging to the King of Siam, att Pullicherry & severall more expected, Itt is order'd that the Curtana Capt^t Anthony Weltden Commander, be sent along the Coast to the Southward, to see if he can meet with them, or any other Enemies ships, & that orders be given him accordingly, & att her return to bee sent into the Bay, she being Consigned thether from the R^t Hon^{ble} Comp^a which should not have been diverted, but upon this extraordinary occasion.

In regard itt would take up a considerable time to bring the Lead out of the Curtana ashore, & ballast her againe, Itt is order'd that itt be continued on board till her return from the Southward."

On the 18th April the Madras Public Consultations (Vol XII p. 58) record "the despatch of the Curtana to Mergen to fetch back all the Englishmen recalled from the service of the King of Syam." The James is ordered to accompany the Curtana on her voyage.

On 'Munday' the 25th April

"To encourage Capt^t Weltden in this present design of the Siam business, Itt is order'd that 3 yards of Scarlet, be given him to make a Coate."

In May it appears from the Consultations Book that the Curtana was sent to recall the George which sailed for England against orders. The Curtana returned on the 16th May.

On 'Munday' the 23rd May

"Capt^t Anthony Weltden, & Mr John Farewell offering Pag^o 2000 belonging to the owners of Ship Curtana, for six months att ten p. Cent Interest p^o. Annum, Itt is order'd that a Bill bee given them for the same, Wee being in great want of money, to defray the Charges of the Garrison, &c^a which was done accordingly."

On the 2nd June we have a note of the departure of the Curtana and James to Mergui.

In the Consultations of the 22nd August we have a copy of the commission and instructions to the Worshipful W. Hodges, Captain A. Weltden, Mr. J. Hill and Captain J. Perriman for their negotiations in Tenasseree. In this lengthy document Weltden is mentioned several times. In the following passage he is designated for the post of Deputy Governor of Mergui.

"And if you settle any ways att Mergen, we then hereby order & appoint the Worp^l William Hodges Esq^r Governour, Mr. Samuell White Deputy Govern^r & Mr John Hill Cap^t of that Garrison & third of Councill, & in case of the decease, absence or refusall of the others, to succeed to the Government, & to make choice of such persons upon the place, or belonging to the Ships, as shall be thought faithfull, & fitting to supply the Councill for the time being and to prevent any disputes or disorders in our Shipping, Wee appoint Cap^t. Weltden Admirall, Cap^t Perriman Vice Admirall, and Cap^t Armiger Gostlin Reer Admirall, in absence of our land Councill, who when aboard any of the said Ships, are to take place, as stated in the title of this Commission, only Cap^t Weltden to bee also of your land Councill, and to take place next the Deputy Governour."

In an abstract of a letter from the Fort St. George Council to the Court of Directors dated the 25th September, 1687, we have

98. "Mary, Curtana, and James Friget Sent to Tenasseree to demand of the King of Siam Satisfaction for dammages, which if denyed to take Ships etc. on them Sent 43 Souldiers as per Consultation etc. sent also the Pearl the 29th August thither and to Mergen, with Mr Hodges and Hill on her, with 17 Souldiers and Lascars and Slaves, hope Mr White and Burneby will quietly Surrender, and the English obey the Kings command, had they received letters of the Kings to White believe he would have rendered the Fort etc. to them, they gave him all the assurances they could of the truth of such a letter, tho' had not copy, the originall to come to them via Suratt, no interest shall biass them from obeying the Company's orders.

In an abstract of another letter from Fort St. George to Bombay dated the 29th September, we read

2. The 29th August the Pearl dispatched to Mergen and Tenasseree with the King's Proclamation on her went Mr Hodges, and Mr John Hill with Commission etc. and Souldiers to make those sent per Curtana and James Sixty besides Officers and 4000 Dollars Ammunition etc. to Storm the place and maintain it, hope Mr White will Surrender it, which is else design'd for the French, who have five men of war and 2000 Souldiers gone to Siam.

On the 8th December, 1687, the Madras Public Consultations Book records.

"The Delight Robert Mellish Master arrived from Acheen, who give an Acc^t. of the Insurrection of the Natives att Mergen & their Massecreing the English there, which he heard from Cap^t Weltden & Mr Samuell White att Acheen, who are gone to the Gingerlee Coast, and from thence design'd hithor."

On the 25th December

"The Curtana Frigat Cap^t Anthony Weltden Commander arrived here from Mergen, & the Cap^t delivers a Generall Letter from M^r Samuell White dated yesterday, wherein he advises that upon some urgent occasions he had made a stop att Palliacat for some dayes, but would be here with all possible speed."

On 'Munday' the 26th December

Att a Consultation

Cip^t. Anthony Weltden Commander of the Curtana Frigat arriveing yesterday from Tenassery, was sent for to give an acct of his voyage, & the discharge of his Commission upon that expedition who desired time till next Consultation day, to transcribe his Diary, which should give us a full & faithfull acct of all transactions therein, which thō lamentably unsuccessfull, by the trecherous insurrection of the Natives, yet no fault of his, having punctually discharged his duty, he also acquainted us that he had been att the Island of Negrais, and exactly Survey'd its Scituation & conveniency, & found itt so advantagious a place, for the R^t Hon^{ble} Comp^{as} Settlement, fitting safeguard of Shipping that he took possession thereof for them, in the King of Englands name & behalf, raising a Standard with his Majesties Coulers, and an Inscription on a plate of Tinn to that purpose, burning Severall Hutts, & a peece of Timber carved with Siam Characters, which the Syamers had left there, in token of possession, & right to the place, his discription thereof was also desired and promised, as also of the Niccambar Islands where he had spent sometime, & brought a Spanish Priest thence with his observations upon the people & place, leaving another behind, sent thether to convert the ignorant Inhabitants, he also toucht att Acheen & came thence in Company with Samuell White on Ship Resolution, their first Anchoring on this Coast being att Madapollam, where they^e stayed 4 or 5 dayes, & in their way hither left M^r White and his Ship on some business att Palliacat, who wrot us a Generall Letter there, that he intended in few dayes to come hither, in obedience to his Majesties Proclamation, and the R^t Hon^{ble} Comp^{as} commands, which he had strictly observed upon their first publication att Mergen, & should readily contribute, his best advice & Service upon any occasion we should require itt.

And the Curtana being well man'd & fitted, & itt growing late and no Ship yet arrived from the Bay or the Southward, & not knowing when they will, or how fitt they may bee, to bee dispatch 't with advices to England, which by the many bad circumstances wee are under, is of great consequence & necessity to bee sent home, Itt was therefore proposed to the Councill, whether we should lade & send the Curtana now for England, or discharge her from the R^t Hon^{ble} Comp^{as} Service, which upon debate 'twas resolved to discharge her this day from Service & demorage in consideration of the charge of her Tonnage, which would be Wanting on another Ship whose freight must bee paid whether we lade or not, the Royall James being suddenly expected from Coodaloor, and Severall others in few dayes from the Bay, Cap^t Weltden was acquainted that the R^t Hon^{ble} Comp^a had no further occasion att present for his ship, & that he was free to trade in the Country, according to their License given him, & 'tis order'd that the Book Keeper, do make up the acct of her demorage &c^a and that itt bee paid accordingly, as also the late President &c^{as} obligation to the

Capt^{ns} for Pag^o 2000 taken of him att Interest for the Rt Hon^{ble} Comp^{ys} accompt.¹

In an abstract of a letter from Fort St. George to the Court of Directors dated 21st January, 1688, we read:—

4. Curtana and James sloop with 40 souldiers and suitable Ammunition dispatched to Mergen and Tenasseree, with Commission to demand satisfaction of the King of Siam, which if denied to publish the Proclamation for recalling the English thence, and make war on him and his subjects seizing Mergen, to reinforce them sent the Pearl with forty Souldiers and Mr Hodges and Mr John Hill, wrote also to Mr Burneby and White acquainting them of the Kings letter to them, which was not come yet to them being on the Bengall, yet sent some Para^s to them of the generall letter to that purpose, but Captain Weltden arriving the 25th December with them acquaints them that he and the James had been at Mergen, welcom'd by the English to whom deliver'd the Letters to them and the King, making a truce for 50 days to await his answer but 14 days after on the 14th July the Natives broke the Truce, and at nine at night killed all the English they could meet Captain Weltden and Mr White escaped with wounds to their boat and to aboard the Curtana cutting her cable sailed out of the River, but their great Guns playing on sloop James took her and some of her men, the Master and Boats crew escape [d] to the Curtana, the rest with all English massacred to the Number of 50, some women and children that hid themselves saved, French report this was long [along?] of Captain Weltden and Mr White; Mr. White on a countrey ship stopt at Palliacat, went thence to Pullicherry sailing for Bombay as they write us, whether they have wrote about him. . . .

43. The Island Negraes they will promote for a Settlement there, for it's many advantages, it being a very fertile place, and fit for any ship to ride out a Monsoon, and to lay aground in Safety, as by report of Captain Weltden, being but six days sail from the Fort or Bengall, Captain Weltden found no Inhabitants thereon, but a Siam Inscription erected on a standard which he supposed to be that King's title of possession, but the Captain burnt it placing another Inscription on Tinn that he had taken possession thereof in the King of England's name for the Company's service.

In the abstract of another letter from Fort St. George to the Court of Directors dated the 24th February, 1688, we read

3. The Tenasseree expedition has been unhappy, Captain Weltden being Sent thither agreed on a fifty days Truce but broken in 22, the English Murtherd after receipt of the Compa^s Orders per Williamson, sent the Pearl thither with Mr Hodges and Mr Hill and 50 Souldiers Etc. to assist the Curtana, hear they are arrived at Mergen, and Mr Hodges and Hill gone to Siam, but without orders. They have taken severall Siam Prizes.

Having thus been discharged from the service of the Company Weltden continued to trade in the East on his own account for the next two years and is mentioned more than once by Dampier in his Voyages.¹

¹ It appears that the Curtana was not a ship in the regular employ of the Company, but was only used by the Madras Council for the occasion.

Thus in Vol I, chap. XVII, p. 477, Dampier mentions that Captain Weldon touched at the Nicobar Islands, and in Vol I, chap. XVIII, p. 505, he says that he set out to Tonqueen with Captain Weldon about July, 1688, and returned to Achin in the April following. In Vol I, chapter XVIII, p. 507, Dampier says that sometime after Christmas, 1689, he learnt that the Curtana had been "sold to the Mogul's subjects," who "employed Mr Morgan as Captain to trade in her for them."²

In a letter from Fort St. George to the Court dated January, 1689, (O.C. No. 5658) :—

"No news yet from Tonqueen, but daily expect it by the Saphir and Curtana."

In another letter from Fort St. George to the Court dated 21st September, 1689, (O.C. No. 5679) :—

"Our Severall Letters has largely advised Your Honours of the Merge Negotiation commenc'd by President Gyfford &c¹ who sent thither Captain Weltden on the Curtana Frygot, and the James Sloop with the 50 Soldiers Your Honours ordered in your letter of the 22nd October 86 : to which upon the arrivall of the Williamson Wee adventured to send 35 more upon the Pearle Friggot with Mr Hodges and Mr Hill to assist Captain Weltden in that designe who before their arrivall mett that cruel misfortune, which Your Honours have long since been advised of"

For the next twenty years the history of Captain Weltden is practically blank. At sometime during this period he must have married his wife Mary, and during a part of this period he was probably busily engaged in defending his conduct in the Mergui expedition. By 1703 the various claims in connection with the Curtana seem to have been at last settled by the Directors of the East India Company in England, for on the 19th October of that year the Court of Committees,³

"On reading a Note deliverd in by Mr Acton Ordered that the Secretary give Captain Weltden Copy of the Discharge which the owners and Commander of the Curtana gave the Company."

This is the solitary notice of Captain Anthony Weltden which I have been able to discover in the Company's records till the 11th

The details of the proceedings of President Weltden in Calcutta having been given in extracts from the Consultations Books.

Alexander Hamilton in his *East Indies*¹ accuses Weltden of corruptly taking bribes through his wife, and the charge of corruption is several times brought against him in the records. Before however the Court of Directors at home could have known of these charges, they, apparently for no reason at all, dismissed Weltden from his high office.

The Court Book (Vol. XLIV) records the following proceedings in this connection.

Fryday 9th June [1710]. Resolved That this Court will immediately proceed in the Consideration of the State of the Companys Affaires in India, And Severall matters being offer'd in the debate with relation to the Affaires in the Bay and a Motion being made That Captain Anthony Weltden be removed from the Presidentship of Fort William in the Bay of Bengall And the Question being put by the Ballott was carried in the Affirmative.

Resolved That Captain Anthony Weltden be removed from the Presidentship of Fort William in the Bay of Bengall.

This order was confirmed on the 14th June, and the Court proceeded as follows:—

“The Court resuming according to the Resolution of last Court the further Consideration of the affairs of the Bay whether the same should be mannaged by a President and Councill or by a Rotation in the Chairmen, and the Question being put whether the Company's affair in the Bay shall be managed by a President and Council, It was carried in the Affirmative. A motion being made

That Mr Ralph Sheldon should be President in the Bay of Bengall and Mr Robert Hedges being also proposed to be President and Mr John Russell being likewise propos'd to be President and the said Persons being severally Ballotted for and Mr Sheldon having the Majority of Balls was declared to be President.

Mr John Russell	} being each proposed to be Second of the Council in the Bay

And Mr John Russell having the Majority of Balls by the Ballott was declared to be Second of Council in the Bay. Mr Hedges being proposed to be Third of the Council in the Bay and the previous Question being put by the Ballott whether he should be Proposed for Third of Council It was carried in the Affirmative. Resolved By the Ballott That Mr. Robert Hedges be Third of the Council in the Bay."

The Commissions were accordingly made out and sealed on the 21st and 23rd June.

On "Fryday" the 30th June

"The Court causing the Paragraph of the Letter to the Bay to be read over again wherein is a Blank for the time of Mr Weltdens Stay in the Bay or at the Coast, Resolved That the said Blank be filled up with the words in Six Months from the Receipt hereof.

After this come entries of the receipt of letters from Weltden

(a) One dated 13th May 1710 from the Cape (Recd. 22nd Sep. 1710)

(b) Another 18th Jan. 1711. from Bengal by the King William (Recd. 24th Aug. 1711).

(c) A third dated 13th February 1711 from Bengal by the Susanna (Recd. 10th Oct. 1711)

On Wednesday, 19th December,

The Court being informed, That severall summs of Money have been demanded by Mr Weltden, the late President in the Bay, of the Black Merchants, and others there, and particularly fifty Thousand Rupees of Jonardaun Seat, Ordered That the Committee of Correspondence be desired to prepare a Clause to be put into the Generall Letter to the Bay, to make enquire whether any, and what sums of money have been demanded, and taken by the said Mr Weltden of Jonardaun, or any others, and on proof thereof if Mr. Weltden be then in the Bay, That they cause him to refund the same, and if he be gone from thence, That they send the Company an Account of the Effect of their Enquiries.

This order was confirmed on the 28th December.

Weltden and his family left Calcutta by the Sherborne on 7th January 1712. This ship was taken by the French off the Cape of Good Hope on the 17th April 1712 and carried off to the Isle de Bourbon. Here all the prisoners and the whole cargo of the Ship were transferred to the Adelaide in which they sailed for France. In February 1713 they arrived at Port Louis and the Sherborne was declared a lawful prize and her cargo confiscated to the French. Weltden declared his own effects on board the Sherborne to be worth 15,000£, but this estimate must have been greatly exaggerated. Weltden arrived in Paris at the end of March, or the beginning of April, 1713.¹

On reaching England later in the year he made a representation of his losses to the company and demanded compensation as appears from the following entries in the Court Book XLVI.

On Wednesday 2nd June 1714, we have.²

“ Letter from Anthony Weltden Esq^r dated May 1714 being read together with Copy of his Letter of the 28th December last, thereto annexed, And the whole being considered off, Ordered That it be referred to the Committee of Correspondence, to consider of both the said letters; and report the matter of fact, with their opinion thereupon.”

On Wednesday the 27th October Weltden agreed to submit his demands to arbitration.

“ Mr. Nightingale acquainting the Court, That Mr Weltden who was President of Fort William, is desirous to submit all his Demands on The Company to Arbitration; And That The Committee of Correspondence to be Arbitrators, The Court Consented thereunto, and Ordered That Covenants of Arbitration be drawn out accordingly, And That all the said Mr Weltden's Demands be submitted to The said Committee of Correspondence, which are the Chairman, Deputy, Sir Justus Beck, Mr Elwick, Mr Gould, Mr Gough, and Mr Nightingale, or any four of them, to be determined in a Months time.”

The Covenants of Arbitration were agreed to on the 5th November and on the 26th November Anthony Weltden was awarded £1200 in satisfaction of all his claims.

“ Award made by S^r Charles Peers, S^r Robert Child, Mr Elwick, Mr Gould and Mr Nightingale, and Dated this 26th of November being-read, Whereby the said Arbitrators Award, That the Company shall within ten Dayes pay to Anthony Weltden Esq^r twelve Hundred Pounds, full Satisfaction and Discharge of all Salary, Reckonings, Debts, Dues, Damages, Pretensions, Claims, and Demands whatsoever, whether in Law or Equity, and deliver him up his Covenants and Security to be cancelled; That the said Mr Weltden shall give a proper Discharge for the Money, and deliver up the Counterpart of his Covenants under the Companies Common Seal to be cancelled, And also give the Company a Generall Release. Ordered That a Warrant be made out to the said Anthony Weltden for twelve hundred pounds, in pursuance of the said award; and That his Covenant and Security be delivered him up to be Cancelled, he complying with the said award for so far as concerns him."

On the 22nd December the draught of a release to be given by Anthony Weltden was made ready.

On the 12th January, 1715, Anthony Weltden writes to the Company's Secretary, Mr. Wooley, as follows¹—

Sr.

I was in hopes to have waited on you this morning according to my promise. But since I saw you I am relapsed and in Greate paine of the Goute that tis not possible for me to stir out, I Informed you that the Counterpart of my Covenant wth the Company was Lost when I was taken by the French, which is true, and Since they cannot be returned, I suppose y^r Hon^{ble} Court will not Insist upon a thing that cannot be.

From the parish register of Well in Lincolnshire it appears that

"Anthony Weltden Esqr. Governor and President of Fort William in Bengal dy'd in London March 13th [1715 and was] Buried at Well March 24th."

The same register records the burial of Mrs. Mary Weltden, widow, in 1717.¹

The will of Anthony Weltden is preserved in the probate registry at Somerset House, London.

Anthony Weltden of Well, Lincoln, makes a will dated 28th May 1706, leaving £ 2000 to his daughter, Mary, on her attaining the age of 24 years, £ 1500 each to his sons, George and Henry, on their attaining the age of 24 years; he leaves his landed estate in the County of Lincoln to his eldest son, Anthony; he leaves £ 250 per annum to his wife, Mary Weltden, while she remains a widow, also one third of his estate, and the mansion at Wellen for her residence. His wife, Mary Weltden, is left executrix, and George Townsend of Lincoln's Inn, and his kinsman, Henry Weltden of Thornby, Northamptonshire, are trustees.

Anthony Weltden makes a codicil to his will on the 4th January 1709. He states, as his reason for so doing, that he is about to undertake a voyage to the East Indies and that he intends to take his wife with him. He now leaves as executors his wife, Mary Weltden, George Langton of Weltden, Lincoln, and Henry Weltden his kinsman. He cancels a small legacy to his sister-in-law, Mrs. Bowen. There are no other material alterations, and the original will is to stand.

In March, 1715 (date of month left blank) Anthony Weltden makes a second codicil, revoking that of 1709. He is in great trouble about his daughter Mary who has married a Mr. Griffin. Anthony states that he is suffering much distress of mind as it is alleged that Griffin has previous wife who is still alive. Until matters are cleared up Mary is not to have her legacy, but is to be allowed fifty pounds a year while she keeps apart from Griffin. Should the marriage be proved to be legal, the legacy is to be paid. Should it be illegal and Mary should lawfully marry again, she is also to have her money.

The sons, George and Henry, are to have £ 1000 instead of £ 1500 each. There is no mention of the eldest son, Anthony. The executors are his wife, Mary Weltden, his kinsman, Henry Weltden, and his friends, George Langton of Lincoln and Samuel Taylor of Warwick.

¹ I am indebted for these entries to the Revd. E. H. R. Tatham, Rector of Well and laxby.

The Will and Codicil were proved on the 6th December 1715.

No mention is made in this Will of his son Edward who was left in Calcutta as an ensign in the garrison. On the 9th June, 1713, ensign Weltden was appointed lieutenant.¹ And he was also gentleman at arms.² He died in April, 1715.³

This Edward Weltden is twice referred to in the Court Book XLVII. On the 14th August, 1717, Henry Weltden petitions to be paid the effects of his brother Captain Edward Weltden, late of Bengall, deceased. And on the 4th September, 1717, £ 90-10 6, due on account of Lieutenant Edward Weltden, late of Bengall, deceased, is ordered to be paid to such as have legal power to receive the same.

II.—THE FAMILY AND PERSONAL HISTORY OF JOHN RUSSELL.

The family of John Russell, "the Chequers Russells," as Carlyle calls them, were of ancient descent. The baronetcy in the family dates from the 19th January, 1629, when Sir William Russell was created a baronet by Charles I. From him the title descended to his son Sir Francis and his grandson Sir John Russell. In 1664, Sir John Russell third baronet married Frances, youngest daughter of the Lord Protector Cromwell, and relict of Robert Rich, son of Lord Rich, and grandson of Robert, Earl of Warwick. The fourth son of Sir John and Frances Russell was John Russell, Governor of Fort William, 1711-13, and two of their grandchildren also held high office in Calcutta, namely, Henry Frankland, Governor, 1726-28, and Sir Francis Russell, who died second member of Council, in 1743.

The family seat was originally at Yaverland in the Isle of Wight, and afterwards at Chippenham in the county of Cambridge. The Chequers estate in Buckinghamshire was acquired through the marriages of Governor John Russell and his children with the Revetts. The armorial bearings of the Chequers Russells are—

Arms. In chief sable three escalops arg. in base arg. a lion rampant gules.

Crest. A goat arg. attired and gorged or.

Sir John Russell 8th Bart

John Russell, Governor of Fort William 1711—13.

John Russell, youngest and posthumous son of Sir John Russell Baronet of Chippenham and Frances youngest and favourite daughter of Oliver Cromwell, was born in London on the 4th October 1670.¹ On the recommendation of "Mr. Francklyn and Mr. Marshall" he was on 22nd Nov. 1693 elected a factor for the East India Company. On the 1st December 1693 the Court of Directors as securities from him in £1000 Thomas Francklyn Esq. and William Brockett Esq. of London. On the 22nd January, 1694, he took the oath of a freeman.² He arrived Factor in Bengal 3rd Dec. 1694.³ On the 7th December 1697

he married his first wife Rebecca sister of Sir Charles Eyre of Kew, Surrey, by whom he had one son and three daughters.¹ The details of John Russell's career in India are given in the extracts from the Consultations Books contained in this volume and the previous one. He resigned the office of Governor on Thursday 3rd December 1713, and took his passage home on the Marlborough. She left the Sandheads on the 9th December 1713, and arrived at the Cape in April, and reached England in August 1714.² In the fourth volume of the East India Company's records for this time known as "Miscellanies," pages 118 to 121, there are letters referring to a dispute between a Mr. John Russell and the Company regarding the money due to him on account of the Old or London Company. Mr. Wooly the Company's Secretary tendered Mr. Russell £ 520 on behalf of the Company. But Mr. Russell declared that a great deal more was due to him and that he had been seven years trying to get his money. This was in September, October, 1714. Mr. Russell is said to be living in his house near the Church at Wapping, London. This Mr. John Russell may have been the late Governor of Calcutta, but it is strange that his title is not mentioned.

On 7th September, 1715, John Russell of Duke Street, St. James Westminster married Joanna sole daughter and heiress of John Thurban of Chequers Court and Alsborough, Buckinghamshire. By his second wife John Russell had only one child who died an infant.

In 1727 his two daughters Mary and Elizabeth with a maid servant Judith Weston left England for Bengal in the Stretham. The Court Book on the 3rd November 1727 records:—

"Governor Russell attending the Court and requesting that his two daughters and a maid servant may take passage to Bengal on the Stretham. Ordered that his two daughters have liberty to proceed on the usual terms and that the servant have likewise leave to go without charge to the Company."³

John Russell died at Bath on 5th December, 1735.

Sir Charles Eyre.

The early history of Sir Charles Eyre up to the year 1701 when he finally left Bengal for England has been given by Sir Henry Yule in his great edition of the Diary of Sir William Hedges. In working out the personal history of John Russell the following additional facts have been brought to light.

² See the log of the Marlborough given elsewhere

³ Passage dated in the Miscellanies, 2nd December 1727.

Sir Charles Eyre was the brother-in-law of Governor John Russell, his sister Rebecca being Russell's first wife. Sir Charles was also in all probability the godfather of Governor Russell's eldest son, Charles, as appears from the inscriptions on the monument erected over their common grave at Kew.

It appears that Sir Charles Eyre on his return to England in 1701 married Elizabeth Carey and settled at Kew Green where he had a house and gardens. He took a prominent part in the erection of the church at Kew.

I can find only one letter from him at this period in the India Office records which runs as follows:—

To the Hon^{ble} Court of Directors of the East India Company

Gentlemen.

My indisposition hinders me from coming to sign as one of the securitys for my Nephew William Bowridge but I do hereby promise to do it when I am well enough to come to town.

CHARLES EYRE.

CUE GREEN

Aprill 25th 1721.

Sir Charles Eyre died on the 26th September 1729, in the 69th year of his age. His will (269 Abbott), dated the 26th September, 1627, with two codicills, dated respectively 2nd Nov., 1727, and 24th August, 1729, was proved on the 7th October, 1729.

The bulk of his property is bequeathed first of all to his wife Elizabeth Eyre who is constituted sole executrix. She is given £500 a year in annuities, also £5000 together with the house and gardens at Kew Green, the plate, jewells, household goods, furniture, carriages and horses, with power to dispose of the same if she likes. But if they are sold the money is to be put out at interest for the benefit of his nephew Charles Russell. At the death of his wife Elizabeth, the bulk of his property is to go to his nephew Charles Russell, or if he is dead, is to be divided between his three nieces Frances, Mary, and Elizabeth Russell, or the survivors.

Elizabeth, Lady Eyre, died on the 16th January 1736, in the 56th year of her age. Her will (8 Derby) dated the 21st December 1735, 1st Codicil 27th Dec. 1735, 2nd Codicil 14th Jan. 1736, was proved on the 24th January 1736. In it she mentions her sisters, one of them being Mary Carey, who is left £300.

The common tomb of Sir Charles Eyre and Col. Charles Russell may still be seen on the north-east side of Kew church, to which position it was moved in 1884, when the east end was enlarged. At one end is a shield with the arms of Eyre, and at the other a shield party per pale with arms of Eyre and of Carey, the family of Sir Charles Eyre's second wife. The inscription to the memory of Sir Charles Eyre and his second wife on the north side of the tomb runs as follows :—

Under this Monument Lyeth interred the Body of Sir Charles Eyre Kt.
Who for several years was Governor of Fort William in Bengal

Which office of Great Trust He discharged with the utmost Skill and Fidelity to the Entire Satisfaction of the East India Company
He Lived in this Hamlet upwards of 28 Years towards their Cloathing and Education Also Here Lyeth the Body of Lady Eyre, Widow and Relict of the Above Sir Charles Eyre Kt.

She died the 16th January, 1735, in the 56 Year of her age.

The inscription to Charles Russell is on the south side of the tomb, and runs thus :—

III.—ROBERT HEDGES.

The history of the family of Robert Hedges and of Robert Hedges himself has already been dealt with at great length by Sir Henry Yule in his edition of the Diary of Sir William Hedges for the Hadyt Society.

The following extract from the pedigree shows the relation between Robert Hedges, Governor of Fort William, 1714-1717, and his uncle, Sir William Hedges, Governor and Chief in the Bay of Bengal 1682-84.

IV.—CAPTAIN HENRY CORNWALL.

Captain Henry Cornwall is a person about whom a good deal is found in the Company's records, though I have not been able to trace either his birth or death. He apparently was of good family and had influential connections. He entered the service of the Crown according to his own statement under King William about 1689 and joined the Company's Service about 1701. From 1704 to 1706 he is entered as a sea-faring man in the list of inhabitants at Madras. In 1707 he entered into a contract of marriage with Elizabeth Browne which he never fulfilled and returned to England hoping to improve his position. The petition of Elizabeth Browne against Captain Henry Cornwall on the subject of his promise to marry her and Henry Cornwall's defence are given in full in the Madras Public Consultations for the 15th and 19th February, 1711, and have been printed by Wheeler in his

'Madras in the Olden Time.'¹ In 1709 Captain Henry Cornwall appears in the Company's records as the Captain of the Sherborne, and for the next three or four years his fortunes are identical with the fortunes of his ship.

When the Sherborne was taken in April, 1712, Cornwall was brought back to India on one of the French Men of war and was detained as a prisoner at Pondicherry. In August, 1713, he arrived in England on the Heathcote. On the 2nd September he wrote as follows to the Company

To the Honourable Court of Direct^{rs} for the affairs of the Hon^{ble} East India Comp^y

Hon^{ble} Srs

In the seventh volume of Court Miscellanies are preserved in original the following letters regarding the appointment of Briercliffe:—

1. TO THE HONOURABLE THE DIRECTORS OF THE EAST INDIA COMPANY.

I can only give this testimony of the Rev. Mr. Briercliffe that being well recommended to me, I helpt to place him as Assisting Curate to the late Rector of Hatfield, Dr. Thomas Fuller, who often expresst to me his Approbation of him, that he was a sober and diligent Man and a good Preacher, and was well beloved by the People for his quiet and peaceable behaviour among them which character I believe to be very true.

Munday, 1st Jan. 1710 [ie 1711]. This morning the Gunner told me he had an account of four saile of French men of war arrived in Ballasore road and anchor'd there and he having the account In the Night sent away an express which he had sent to my mate to send our boat on board all the Ships that were gone Down: the said Express was an order for all the ships to Return up the River Againe as high as Rangafulla or Rogues River upon which news I sent a boat on board with an order to put the ship in a posture of Defence and told the Governer that I was ready to obey his Orders his answer to me was when he apprehended any danger or would have me Goe down to the Ships he would give me timely Notice." . . .

Friday, 12th Jan. 1710 [ie 1711] "Yesterday in ye Afternoon the Govener sent for me before ye Counsell and told me yt It was Capt. Raymond's opinion yt It would be for ye Compa's Interest and Safety of ye ships yt the King William might be dispatcht to Goe out with ye ships and Goe with them towards Madras as far as they should think Convenjent and yt It was thare oppinion It should be so and they would Give Orders accordingly" To this the captain objected that there was no reason for risking three ships instead of two, by sending him along the coast where the French ships were supposed to be, and that it would be better for him to keep as far away as possible from the coast and the French. "So I heard no more of Goeing towards ye Cost of Cormedell."

Captain Henry Cornwall Comander of The Shipp Sherbourn having sent to The Councill a Declaration of The refractory behavior of His Officers and seamen who would not obey him nor doe their Duty in the business of his Shipp The President and Councill Theirnpon sent a Poisitive Comand down to Rouges River on board the Shipp to every Officer and Seaman to do their Duty in bringing the Shipp to this Place and give their Comander all due obedience which order took such Effect that The Shipp arriv'd before the Fort the 16th Inst. and finding the Officers and seamen in Generall Complaining they had been hardly used by their Comander Twas resolved to summon the Commanders of the Honourable Company's Shipping and give em a hearing The Chief Mate 2^d Mate 4th Mate Gunner Boatswain Carpenters mate and severall others were sent for and most of Them shewed a very great Unwillingness to goe any more on board under Y^e Comand of Cap^t. Mr Robt Arbuthnot,⁹ in a letter dated Rouen, 26th Jan. 1713 NS. advised the Court that an English East India ship had been taken by some ships belonging to Monsieur Crozat and Company, and had been brought into Port Louis. He offered his services.

⁷ Miscellanies, IV, 28.

⁸ Miscellanies IV, at the beginning.

⁹ This was a brother of the celebrated Dr. Arbuthnot.

On the 28th January the Committee reported.

"The Committee appointed the 23rd Instant to prepare a Memorial touching the East India Company's ship Sherborne that was taken and carried into France did in pursuance thereof draw out a Memorial w^h was sign'd by the Secretary and present the same to the Lord Treasurer, and two others of the same import one to my Lord Dartmouth and the other to My Lord Bolingbroke.

Their Lordships were pleased severally to assure the Committees who attended them that Letters should be wrote that night to the Duke of Shrewsbury Her Maj^{ties} Ambassador at Paris to do what in him lay for recovering the Ship and Cargo.

The Committee having received a letter from Mr Robert Arbuthnet, Merch^t at Rouen, to this Court sent under Cover of his Brother Dr Arbuthnet's Packett advising of the Ships being carried into Port Louis and other matters relating thereunto and the said Mr Arbuthnet having referr'd in his Letter to Sr John Lambert for a character of him, the Committee thereupon discours'd Sr John as to the best methods to be taken in the present Conjuncture and on ye whole did write a Letter to Mr Arbuthnet and sent him a blank Pass which he desired.

. . . . Since then the Committee are informed there is a Letter in Town w^{ch} came from the late President Weltden that advises ye Sherborn was taken the 17th April last off Cape Agullas¹ near the Cape of Good Hope. If this be true, as is most likely, the Committee are afraid the French may proceed to Condemn her as hoping She will be a lawful Prize.

The Committee being informed by Mr Arbuthnet that Monsieur Crozat is concerned in the ships which took the Sherborne and that he found very honourable Usage in being permitted to buy on easy terms another Ship of his called the Griffin some time since taken by Sr Thos. Hardy in her Voyage from Brest towards La Vera Cruz They therefore represent it to this Court as their Opinion That if it should appear the Sherborne was taken before ye Cessation of Arms between England and France commenced it will be for the Comp^{as} Interest to attempt to buy the Ship and Cargo if to be got on good terms and that a Committee be appointed to negotiate the same under such Limitations as the Court shall think proper."

In a letter to Fort St George, dated the 2nd Feb 1713, the Directors speak as follows of the missing ship—

"The Sherborne as Captⁿ Goodman says came in his company from the Bay but was seperated in a Storm in about 8 degrees South Latitude on this side Celyon he believes She is safe because he heard or saw no Signals of Distress. Wee have heard nothing of her as yet Wee are sorry to find by the abstract of her Invoice her Lading is upwards of 413,000 Rs considering how weak She was and the distracted Ship's Company on board of which we wrote largely last year to the Bay and hinted our dislike that they shou'd load any thing considerable on her up to the Fort considering those circumstances If She should come safe wee can't approve our People's management in venturing so great a Stock on so small a Vessel and the rather when she was taken up for only a Pepper Voyage and had been ten days a ground on the Molle Valley Sand off Jafnepatnam and with difficulty got off. It wou'd have been much more to our liking if when she was at Madrass She had been sent to Bencoolen to fill up as the 10th Paragraph of the letter of the 8th February gave us hopes and the reasons there mentioned were good that so by her you might have sent those Stores and Petre you order'd afterwards by other Ships because you had no news of the Jane in October when you must think her a late Ship nor any advices of the West Coast in twelve months before of which you very sadly and justly complain Wee shou'd have been glad if you had sent some Persons to Bencoolen to act provisionally till the Jane arrived."

Mr Arbuthnot writes from Rouen on the 10th Feb. NS. i.e. the 30th January OS. asking for the Sherborne's invoice and for the assistance of some person skilled in East India goods.

"I wrote to Sr John Lambert last week that Mr Prior had been at Versailles and had a promise from M. Pontchartrain the French Kings Minister that the goods in the Ship come to Port Louis shou'd be taken into safe Custody and noways open'd till yo^r orders shou'd come to some Person to treat

"I wrote also that your Ship the Sherborne (which they called the Charbon) was left at the Isle de Bourbon and that the goods were put into this French Ship." . . . One fifth of the whole belongs to the King Supposing the Prize to be Good this the King can't refuse to remitt to the Comp^y (I mean to you gentlemen) being the Queen had no Dutys from the French Ship Griffin which I can make appear wou'd have been of more value than $\frac{1}{5}$ of your goods.

The Admiral has $\frac{1}{10}$ of the whole this I can get an easy composition of, so that the Merchants has (sic) only $\frac{7}{10}$ to sell or compoūd for and if they find the Court favourable to you they will be glad to conclude & give you an advantageous Bargain."

On 14th February, i.e. the 3rd February OS., Mr Arbuthnot wrote that the Sherborne was good prize;

"for 'tis certain that the ship being taken in April is good prize and undisputable . . . I hear of no Prisoner but Mr Weltden & his Lady that are come. I have written to my Friend at Port Louis to hasten him here being he surely can inform me of any considerable Pillaging or plundering and so as that I shall know if the whole Cargoe of the Sherborne is not come in this French ship."

On the 27th February, i.e. the 16th February OS. Mr. Arbuthnot wrote about the ship's cargo.

"He [i.e. the friend at Port Louis] tells me that all that was in your Ship the Sherborne will be found to be in this ship except 9 Bales marqué MIIIL N^o 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 9, 10, 11, 12, which he says the Captors sold at L'Isle de Bourbon for the behoof of his ships for some provisions they wanted."

On the 24th February the Secretary sent instructions to Mr. Arbutnot.

"The Company never receiv'd the Original invoice that coming only by at the ship the goods are laden on. The Prime Cost of all was Rupees 378,044-10 at 2s. 3d. sterling Each Rupee amounts to £42,530-4 Sterling and this is bonafide the true Copy both of the goods and their cost to the Company as received from the Bay of Bengall for you are to understand She was but a small ship and let to the Company for no more than 250 tons."

The Company offered to redeem its own goods for £29,771.

"There were some other goods on board belonging to particular Persons but the Company have no particulars of the number of Parcels or their Cost but they are informed Mr Weltden had forty Parcels as he advised a Friend of his and it is very likely the Captⁿ and officers had some as they always have. The Court would be very willing to include theirs also in the general treaty."

Here probably should come "Mr Simcocks 4th mate of the Sherbornes accot^t given the Committee of the goods &c^a on board," which I have found in Court Miscellanies VI, marked "read in Court 26 De," i.e., I suppose, the 26th February.

On the 9th March i.e. 26th February OS. Mr. Arbuthnot sent a list of the goods of the Sherborne taken out at Port Louis.

"Acco^ut of the Merchandizes imported upon y^e King's Frigate the Adelaide com^{ma}nded by Mons^r Houssay Cap^t of the Fleet and unladen into the Warehouses of the East India Comp^y in the Port of Lorient in the month of Feb 1713. On the 17th March i.e. 6th March OS. Mr. Arbuthnot writing from Paris complained of the slowness of the Company's proceedings.

"It is now Six weeks since the first memoire was given in for you, it is a month yesterday that I am here waiting this Person & orders yesterday this was warmly reproach'd me at Versailles & an offer made for all the goods of 2 millions 2 hundred thousand Livres French which is about 115,000 £ sterl. and I durst not so much as open my mouth . . . I found there [in the he saw connected with the case] a Declaration of Mr Weltden's wherein he esteems his own Effects 15,000 £ st. he esteems the rest of the loading 250,000 £ st.¹

On the 20th March, i.e. the 9th March OS; Mr. Arbuthnot wrote:—

I wish I had known sooner "that even suppose the French wou'd give the same advantages that the Griffin had in England yet you can bring another lading from Bengall cheaper than you can buy this in France.....The first thing that was told me by the Captors (and it is solid enough) was that the first cost of the Griffin was her true value intrinsick when she was carried into England being her Goods were Bought but 3 weeks before but that the first cost of your ship in Bengal was quite different and that the bargain was to run upon the value of your goods in France where they now were . . . The King would forgive his dutys and the Admiral compound his $\frac{1}{10}$ for 40,000 Crowns French ready money . . . The first offer that was made for these goods was 2,200,000 Livres this is to my certain knowledge and the least estimation that has been made of them was 2,600,000 French which is about 150 thousand pound and I know certainly that they are better here than this Sum so that if you can have such a Loading from Bengall for 43,000 £ sterling it wou'd be great folly to pay 75000 for these. I sincerely believe the prices of your Invoice to be true but I cou'd not possible Imagine such a disproportion 'twixt them and the true value here"

On the 31st March we have recorded a translation of Monsieur Grozat's answer to the memorial of the East India Company.

"That they can't reclaim her having been taken beyond the Cape of Good Hope at the begining of April 1712 by three French Men of War that departed from Toulon the end of Oct. 1711 at a time when as yet there was no ground to hope for any treaty with the Queen of Great Britain so any suspension of arms for that it did not commence but the 22nd Aug. 1712 SN. six months after the taking of the ship Sherborne. Upon the depositions of the ship's Crew both English and French the Admiralty of Vannes has adjudged the Prize to be good in Execution whereof the ship has been unladen and the goods put into the Warehouses Inventory taken in the presence of the said Officers since which after several Publications those goods have been adjudged to Sieur Crozat at 2,200,000 Livres.

If the King desires that the preference of this Adjudication of 2,200,000 Lrs. be given to the Company of England the Sieur Crozat as a proof of his submission and to please his Maj^{ty} offers to desist and to yield to the said Company of England the same Merchandizes w^{ch} have been adjudged to him upon their Paying the said sum and charges of the adjudication tho' he be certain to sell these Goods at a Public Sale for above 2,600,000 Livres. This sacrifice he is willing to make in acknowledg^t of the treatment he had in the Ransom of the ship the Griffin tho' he has been made to pay in England above 1,100,000 Livres for the cargo of the s^d ship on board of which there was not above the value of 1,068,000 Lrs. of Merchandise.

On the 22nd April, i.e. 11th April OS., Mr. Arbuthnot wrote from Rouen—

"When I saw no remedy in this 'affair but Patience I left Paris as soon as Mr Weltden arrived there being I found I could be no ways useful to you longer."

In the end the Court refused to redeem the goods on the terms offered by the French.

Letter from the Deputy Governor of Bencoolen.

Rio de Janario,

October 15, 1711. OS.

To the Hon^{ble} the Court of Directors of the United Company of English Merchants trading to the East Indies.

HONED SIRS

I hoped before this time to have advised your Honrs of our safe arrival at the Cape of good hope, but am now obliged to give a more unacceptable account of our affairs, on the 30 of July wee were in 18 degrees south latitude and by Computation 12 degrees merid : distance West of St Jago, when Capt. Austen and his Chief mate told me they found it necessary on account of the lenth of the Voyage and for the refreshment of their men to put into this port : I replied they were best Judges of the Ships Circumstances and that if they found it necessary either for a supply of provisions or refreshment of their men I should not oppose it, on the 18 of August wee arrived in this port, on the 4th or 5th day after wee were alarmed with a report that a french Squadron was on the coast designed for this place : Capt. Austen proposed to saile the next day, and I sent my baggage on board that I might be ready at an hours warning, the next day the Capt: told me he would stay to get in some wood, water, and other provisions, and at length determined to sail the 2^d or 3^d of September, but was prevented by Mons^r. de Guay who with 15 Saile of Men of Warr frigatts and 2 Bomb Vessells entered this Harbour on the first of September, here were 4 Portuguese men of Warr 3 of which burnt themselves the 4th run on shoar and bilged, in 3 days the french were intire masters of the town and all the forts which had been deserted by the Portuguese the night before, the Enemy entred the Harbour with so strong a gale and advanced so fast that I was obliged to pass through their fire in order to get on board the Jane. which was by this time under Saile up the Harbour in hopes to get out of the reach of the French guns,—when I came on board after a little discourse with Capt. Austen I found him determined not to land the treasure nor to destroy the Ship, but to surrender on the first summons it being impossible to defend her, however he thought fit to send a Chest of treasure of his Own up into the Countrey, As for my self and Mr Yarborough wee were unwilling to fall into the Enemy's hands till the fate of the town was decided, having some hopes that in case the French were obliged to return without being masters of the town that wee might procure some passage to the Cape of good hope, and so proceed to India which wee thought of importance for your Hon^{rs} Service, wee therefore quitted the Ship and retired into the Countrey expecting that Event, when I heard that the French were in full possession of the town and all the forts, I apprehended a greater probability of proceeding by their assistance then by remaining among the Portuguese, Mr. Yarborough agreeing with me wee took boat and came down the river, designing to surrender our selves to the French Generall, in our passage down wee saw the Jane riding with her English Colours still flying, wee went on board and found they had not yet bene summoned, but that Captain Austen had determined to send his Mate to surrender the Ship to Mons^r. de Guay in hopes as he said of ransoming her upon easie terms, wee stay'd on board 2 nights and then went in the boat which brought us out of the Countrey and surrender'd our Selves to Mons^r. de Guay, the chief Mate followed emediately in the Ships boat and surrender'd the Ship also, some days after I proposed to the French to buy a small Brigantine, or other small vessell, in order to proceed on my Voyage, they told me there was none in the Harbour in which I could safely undertake such a Voyage, but that they would sell me the Jane, I possitively refused to treat about her, because I would not interfere with the Captain but went to View several small vessells in the Port, which I found answered the Character, I then concluded my return to Europe unavoidable, till about a Fortnight after, when I received a letter from Cap^t. Austen acquainting me that the French would not sell ye Jane without her loading and if I would I might buy both, I went emediately, to him and asked whither he would treat for both, he reply'd he would not, I then first entred on a treaty for her, the French had taken the treasure out excepting one Chest of your Hon^{rs}. and a Small Chest of Mr. Finks, which Capt. Austen informed me had bene stolen by some of the ships Crew and carried away in the pinnace besides which they excepted some Corral that was on board, and for the Ship and remaining part of the loading wee at length agreed for three thousand five hundred pounds, which I esteem the full value in England reckoning the goods includ'd in your Hon^{rs}. bills of lading at fifteen hundred pounds the ship at the same and my own goods with other peoples on board at five hundred, the reasons that induced me to give so large a price after I found they would not sell it at a lower rate, were, because I know the Company's goods consisting Chiefly of navall and Garrison Stores were probably of great importance to the place designed and that therefore it was worth while to give the prime cost in England here especially being by a Seven months pass secured from any further apprehensions of an enemy, besides that I hope the speedy arrivall of myself and Mr Yarborough at Bencoolen will be very much for your Hon^{rs} Interest there, as also that I propose to make of the ship and the separte part of the Cargo on my arrivall in India as much as will be sufficient to make good in the Company's Cash at Bencoolen the Overplus of the purchase above the prime Cost of the goods consigned by your Hon^{rs} to Maderass and Bencoolen which overplus I reckon as before at Two thousand pounds, Urged by those considerations I have taken the liberty to draw on your Hon^{rs} the Summ of Three Thousand five hundred pounds payable to Mons^r. de Guay Trovin or order in St. Maloes three months after the arrivall of the Squadron Commanded by him in France at the then Currant Exchange with which I humbly request your Hon^{rs} Compliance having sent my son and my servant Mr Edmond Bunting as hostages¹ for performance, and that there be no hasard or loss by conferring this obligation, I request that insurance may be made of two thousand pound from hence to Maderas and Bencoolen and the charge placed to my account which will be done on easie terms, considering our Seven months pass and the season of the year for passing the Cape, I wrote to your Hon^{rs} in company with Mr Yarborough by the Florida on the Eighteenth of May being off of Porto Santo, when wee advised the death of Mr. Lee Garrett which hapned a week after our departure from Tor Bay I cannot send Coppy having destroyed it together with all papers of importance, particularly your Hon^{rs} packet before our Surrender to the French.

As I have in the whole of this affair acted with the utmost sincerity what I thought most conducive to your Hon^{rs} interest, so I hope it will be accepted at the hands of

Your Hon^{rs} most humble Servant,

Saturday the 6th. This morning at sunrising in y^e maintop we saw two of y^e Ships in y^e offing and allso saw a Largelake or River within y^e Land but could not discover any Entrance I sent our Pinnis to y^e Shore to know what place it was y^e Surff going so high that they could not Land our boat returned and we made a Cattamaran in order to send on Shore two black servants this being about ten a Clock we saw a grate many people on y^e Shore our boat putt off to go and know what news and if there was any place of security for our Ship the boat being but a very little way from y^e Ship we saw a large saile coming down along y^e Shore upon us with all y^e saile she Could sett I caused our boat to come on board againe in order to weigh but y^e Ship approached us so fast which obleiged us to cutt away our anchor with about a third of our Cable but before we could gitt our sails sett we discover'd her to be that grate Ship that stood away to y^e NE before Night She came up with us very fast but after all our sails was sett we found her to gett but very little on us we steerd along Shore from y^e SW to y^e to Soth keeping in 10 and 11 fathom water it being a bould Shore we had fresh gales and Squalls of rain y^e Wind from y^e NE to y^e NW this Noon we saw 3 saile in y^e offing away with our Lee Catthead y^e Ship that was in Chase of us made a Signall with a blew flag at foretopgallant and mizen topmast head and fired two Guns she being now about 3 miles a Starne with Studdensails and all saile she possible could make between 12 and 1 a Clock we saw something a head which we took for rocks or trees at one we discover'd them to be four Ships at Anchor we hoping they might be Dutch we hauld in for them and handed some of our sails in order to Anchor (and y^e French Ship did y^e same) upon our hoisting our Coullars they hoisted theirs which proved to be moore Ships rideing in Ganjam road we finding it a place of no security we made all y^e Saile we could again as allso did y^e French Ship Continueing his Chase we Steering SWbW in 12 fathom water along Shore it being a fine pleasant Shore and very even Soundings at 2 a Clock y^e white Pagod at Ganjam bore NbW $\frac{1}{2}$ West distance on [°] mile on y^e North side of this place is a high bluff hill or Point which with y^e Pagod is very remarkeable we Continued Steering SWbW y^e Wind at NEbN in a 11 and 12 fathom water at Sun sett Y^e Westernmost Land in sight boare SWbW all y^e first parte of the Night it being hazey we lost sight of y^e Ship we keeping as Close to y^e Shore as possible in 10 and to 7 fathom water we putt a pole with a Candle and lanthorn at y^e End of it into a half tub (with some ballast into it to keep it from over setting) and sent it a Starne to amuse y^e French thinking they would take it to be our light and Shorten saile beleiving they came up with us which I hope had y^e desired Effect about 2 in y^e morning we thought we saw y^e Ship on our Lee quarter to Seaward it being little wind we gott our boat a head and kept towing in order to keepe y^e Shore on board y^e wind came to y^e West and WSW which drove us off into 16 fathom and about 5 a Clock haveing y^e same Depth of Water we tacked in for y^e Shore and stood in untill daylight.

This morning we being close in under y^e Land and little wind when y^e Sunrise at y^e maintopmast head we saw y^e Ship in y^e Offing
Sunday y^e 7th our being so close in with y^e Land beleive they could not see us it being very little wind I sent y^e boat a Shore for to gitt Intelligence and a Cattamaran came of to her and tould us we was then of Aletura which is about 8 Leag^s. from y^e Rocks of St. Pillar our boat being come on board we made y^e best of our way Intending to call at Vissacapatam but y^e wind comeing to y^e West putt us off y^e Shore haveing lost sight of our Enemies we made y^e best of our way to y^e Southward This Ship which Chased us last we Judge to have between 50 to 60 Guns haveing two teere of portes fore and Afte.

Now being at Sea we thought it best to make our way to Forte St. George to give an Account of y^e French being upon y^e coast and to prevent other ships falling in with them."

XI.—LETTER FROM AN ADVENTURER IN CALCUTTA.¹

On the 26th Nov^r. 1712 the writer anchored in 4 fathoms near 'Kedgery' river and was visited in a 'Willoek' by 'Cojey Surratt'² a merchant and prime factor of that nation [Armenian] resident in Calcutta; he

'Brought with him his musick consisting of a Georgian violin, two small kettle drums and the like number of Hautboys with which he entertained us; the instruments were costly and of curious workmanship, to the violin the drums were added in concert, assisted with the voice of the musicians, whose ill tun'd notes and imperfect cadence made most lamentable discord. When they had sufficiently persecuted our ears with this melodious piece of concise harmony, the hautboys went to work; one running to the pitch of double Gamut whilst the other served as a drone, they playing upon them with such vehemency and force, which beating upon the drum of my ear so benumm'd my senses that I could hear nothing than the discharge of a demi culverin; they kept us up pretty late, and about 2 in the morning returned aboard their ship in order to proceed on their voyage.'

² Khojah Sarhad.

After passing 'Roages river' the writer came to 'Tana, a great town to the larboard side of the river, having for its defence a large brick fort to the river, with four round bulwarks;' he describes the 'Checky,' and then continues—

'Having passed this piece of defence with a fine easy gale near two leagues we opened Calcutta our desired port; it gratifying us with a most agreeable prospect which when we were come its length we dropt anchor before the fort, saluting the garrison with 7 guns, who returned us the like compliment.'

The succeeding paragraphs give an account of the writer's short stay in Calcutta—

'I shall not here enter into a description of the remarkables in Calcutta, seeing my abode of 4 days there hath not furnish'd me with a sufficient supply, but shall only inform you on my arrival I paid my respects to the Governor (John Russel Esq^r. to tender him an offer of my service, which he told me he would take into his consideration, upon which taking my leave I repaired to my brother officers of the military, who entertained me with abundance of civility, among them was my good friend Captain Hercules Courtany, a gentleman that had been very serviceable to the Company in the wars at Fort St. David, but had run through the same misfortune as myself, being cashier'd a little before me at Madderass, he coming hither for employ, but meeting with disappointments laid hold of the opportunity of going up to Hugley, where the Moors were embroiled in a war, he entering into the service of Juda Con^l managed the face of affairs so well that it much enlarged his credit, receiving from the Nabob several rich presents for his good service, tho' not so much as was before promis'd him, upon which in a disgust he left them, and was but lately arrived at Calcutta.

Three days being expired I went to know his honours mind, who ingenuously told me he had no vacancy, all his commissions being full otherwise he would give me service, but advised me to go home on board one of the Europe ships. I answered I had not a hundred Pagodas to pay for my passage and seeing I could not now go home to my friends handsomely, I was resolved to stay in India till I could, or necessity forced me to the contrary; so would have taken my leave of the Governor but he called me back [and] would oblige me seeing he had not service for me to give him my word of honour I would not take up service under the Moors; I answered I might as well give him the same that I would receive no sustenance for a twelvemonth, for seeing as in duty bound I had first made proffers of service to my country, which they not accepting I held myself no longer obliged, but was at my free liberty to go take service where I pleased, so that those whom I served were no enemies to my King and Country.

He replied all this is reasonable but then these nations among whom we dwell being ignorant of the law of arms, and the recourse of Englishmen to side with either party might be detrimental to the Company's affairs.

I return'd his honour was only capable of remedying the ills that might thereby accrue, and that to sustain this mortal body bread was required, which it the Company would not give me I should (with his honour's leave) go to them that would; so accordingly taking my leave I went to inform Captain Courtany of my success, who advised me by all means to go up to Hugley, and take service under the Emmer of Bengal, giving me his word, if nothing of consequence interposed he would be soon up after me; we passed the time with various discourse upon that subject and at parting he gave me letters to Monsure Attrope, governor of the Danes factory at Gundulparra who he told me was his friend.'

The writer then gives an account of his visit to the governor of the Danes and a description of their factory, and a short history of the war then in progress, couched in very amusing terms, the leading figures of which are 'Shalium' ¹ 'Mursed Cola Con' 'Juda Con' ² 'Kingcarson' 'Holy beg' ³ 'Collbeg Con' 'Forixear' ⁴.

On reaching the Dutch Factory at 'Chinchura' the writer presented his letter of introduction to Mynheer Hoffmaster, the second in Council, and stayed with him for a fortnight, during which time, he adds,

"I wrote to Captain Courtnay and received letters from him, wherein he informed me of the troubles he was in at Calcutta, the Governor designing to impede his voyage up by sending him to Madarass least he should come to the assistance of the Emmer of Bengal, which as I afterwards heard he effected."

The writer's dealings with the 'Emmer' brought him nothing but misfortune and he resolved to leave the camp. He concludes his letter with a description of 'the Chinchura, Hugley, Golgutt and the Bandell.'

"Golgutt an English factory, subordinate under Calcutta is seated in the city of Hugley on the banks of the river, it here forming itself into a Cove, being deep water ships riding 16 and 18 fathom not a stones cast off shore; being landed and ascended the bank you enter the factory through a large gate beautified and adorned with pillars and cornishes in the Chanam work, and on the top of all is the flagstaff fixed into the brick work whereon they hoist St. George's flag; being entered the gate you come into a small Court yard, on the right hand being a row of apartments, and on the left a Viranda for the guard; you ascend into the house by steps, having under it two square cellars with staircases to descend; the hall is indifferent large, besides two indifferent apartments with chimneys there are other rooms and closets in the house, the whole consisting but of one story.

Behind the house is a garden, in which grows nothing but weeds, in the middle is an ugly well, and at one corner upon the wall is built a round sort of a business like a sentry box, but much larger, you ascend it by a narrow Chenum staircase, which have no rails or fence to keep you from tumbling into the garden, and when entered you see nothing worth observation having a door but never a window tho' it yields an excellent echo, it being contrived as I have been informed as a magazine for powder.

³ Walī Beg.

⁴ Farrukhsiyar.

At the end of the garden are the ruins of several apartments the roofs being fallen in, and indeed all the outhouses are in the like condition of which there are several, you may ascend to the top of the factory by an old wooden staircase which is well terras'd with seats all round and a small oblong place included by its self, from whence you have a prospect of the river; to conclude it is an old, ugly, ill contrived edifice wherein is not the least spark of beauty, form, or order, to be seen, being seated in a dull melancholy hole enough to give one the Hippocondra by once seeing it; the Company have no factor at present that is resident here, being left in the charge of a Molly and two or three Punes, tho' in truth it is hardly worth looking after."
